

Nixon Becomes 37th U.S. President, Pledges to Work for Peace in World

Security High for Ceremony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Up to 20,000 soldiers and police including out-of-town experts known for their ability to spot pickpockets, con men and psychopaths formed the tightest security today ever devised for the inauguration of an American president.

Focal point of the security was the stand in front of the Capitol set up for Richard Nixon's oath taking, the inaugural parade route from there to the White House and the presidential viewing stand on the sidewalk before the executive mansion.

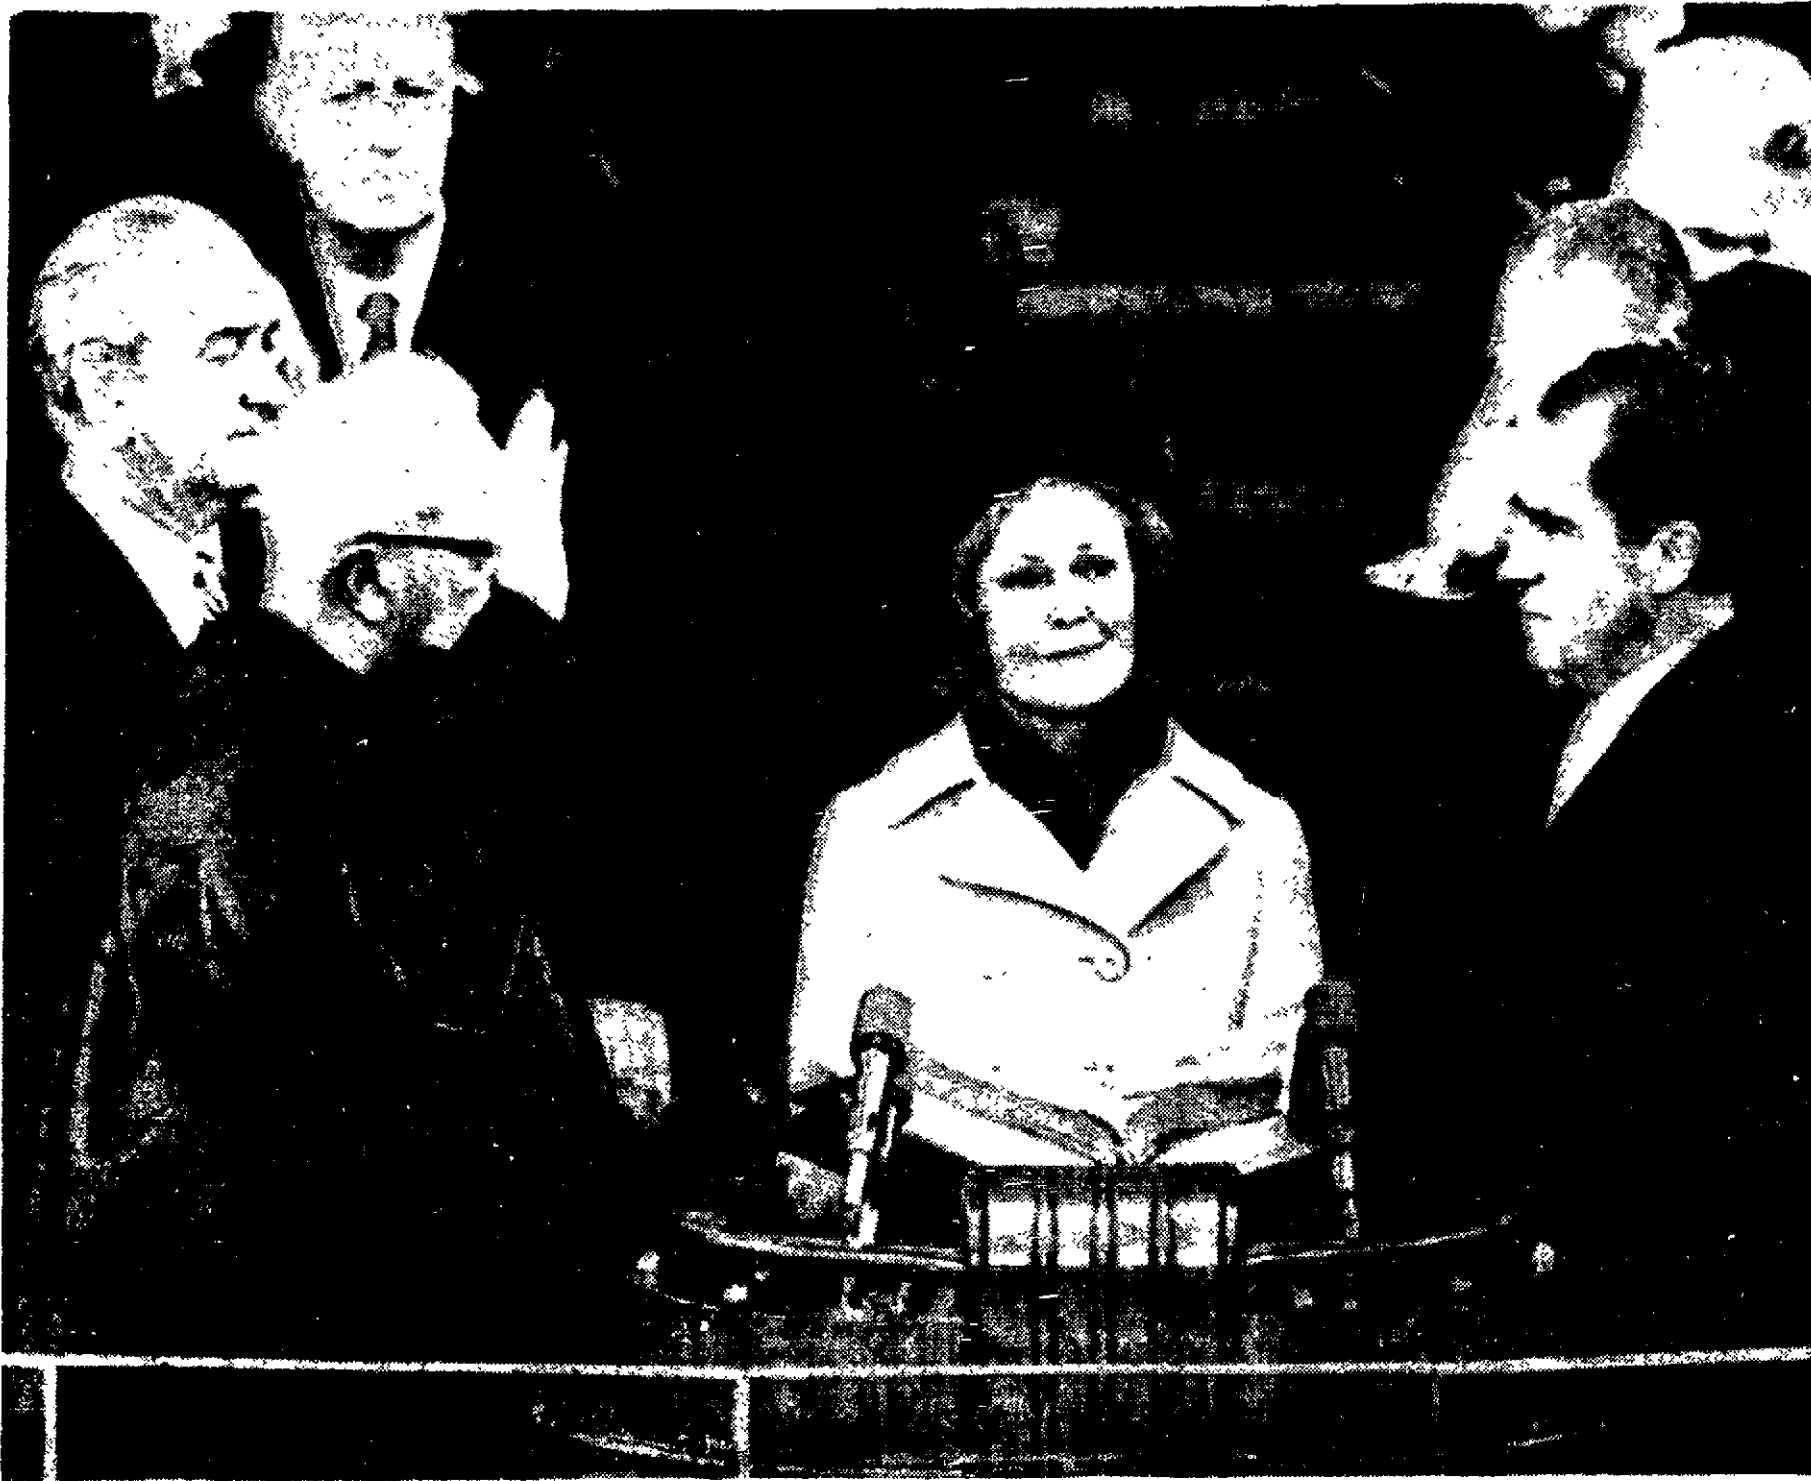

Bulletproof glass protected the front of both the inaugural and viewing stands with flanking panes extending back diagonally to deflect shots from any angle.

Along the parade route manhole covers were locked shut, roofs were cleared of all but uniformed personnel and every last building on both sides of broad Pennsylvania Avenue was barred to all but those with special passes, including permanent occupants.

At the inaugural and viewing stands, concealed from sight, special agents armed with automatic weapons scanned the throngs with wide-angle devices.

Other precautions included helicopters loaded with Secret Service agents hovering over the car carrying Richard M. Nixon and Lyndon Johnson to the Capitol and another patrolling several blocks to the side.

The 10,000 regular troops of the military district of Washington lined the two-mile parade route.

New Leader Takes Oath

By HARRY KELLY
WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon solemnly took the oath as the nation's 37th President today and dedicated his administration in this time of war and turmoil "to the cause of peace among nations."

Under threatening skies—and elaborate security precautions—Nixon placed his hand on two family Bibles held by his wife Pat and repeated after Chief Justice Earl Warren the traditional 35-word oath to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Thus in the Capitol Hill ceremony Richard Nixon, citizen, became President Nixon. And with Lyndon B. Johnson, his predecessor, listening nearby, Nixon called in his inaugural address for Americans "to go forward together."

"We have endured a long night of the American spirit," Nixon declared in obvious reference to the divisions over race and war he has promised to heal.

And he added this appeal: "But as our eyes catch the dimness of the first rays of dawn, let us not curse the remaining dark. Let us gather the light."

To the oath which he took at 12:15 p.m., Nixon added the words, "So help me God."

Pat Nixon, her eyes never leaving her husband's face, held the Bibles, one in each hand, one above the other.

As the cannons boomed out the 21-gun salute, the red-coated Marine band struck up "Hail to the Chief" and then Richard Nixon, 37th President of the United States, began his inaugural address—the charting of his administration's course.

The chilly crowd punctuated its brief applause for Nixon at times during his speech by thumping cold feet on the floor of the wooden stands.

Johnson accompanied Nixon to the Capitol after a coffee-cha at the White House. Both men smiled at each other and shook hands as they met.

Gathered around Nixon on the platform outside the Capitol were many of the nation's leaders—including the Republican and Democratic chiefs of Congress and the Nixon Cabinet—as well as the outgoing President and vice president—Lyndon B. Johnson and Hubert H. Humphrey.

Nixon and his vice president, Spiro T. Agnew, went through the outdoor ceremony without top coats despite the 35 degree chill of the gray day.

But the ceremony was spared the freezing rain and sleet threatened by the weather man.

The overcast day was brightened however by the uniforms of the military, the bright scarlet of the Marine band and the singing of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, which sang, "This Is My Country."

After the ceremony, Johnson planned to turn over stage center as well as the power to Nixon. He intended to be back at his Texas ranch and rocking on the porch by late afternoon.

Demonstrators Are Halted on Parade Route

Several Hundred Youths Appear Near White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-war demonstrators trying to push their way onto President Nixon's inaugural parade route were forced back today by policemen armed with nightsticks and tear gas equipment.

After remaining out of sight during the mid-day ceremony at the Capitol that made Nixon the new President, about 1,000 youths appeared suddenly along the parade route near the White House about an hour before the parade began.

The police quickly formed a barrier and kept the youths from breaking through.

Earlier, when Nixon rode to the Capitol to take the oath of office, the demonstrators were hardly in evidence.

Where 5,000 youths had marched the day before, only about 40 were gathered on a street corner as Nixon and outgoing President Johnson drove past in their bubble-topped limousine trailed by Secret Service cars.

Nixon gave the group only the briefest glance and Johnson looked the other way. A feeble chant of "Peace Now" followed the car, but died quickly.

In their counter-parade Sunday, however, the youthful protesters showed they have elevated Nixon to the position of No. 1

'...The Times Are on the Side of Peace'

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon launched his administration today with a pledge to consecrate his office, "my energies and all the wisdom I can summon, to the cause of peace among nations."

For the first time, he said, "because the people of the world want peace and the leaders are afraid of war, the times are on the side of peace."

The problems at home, he said in his inaugural address, are caused by a crisis of the spirit: "We can build a great cathedral of the spirit—each of us raising it one stone at a time, as he reaches out to his neighbor, helping, caring, doing."

He said his administration will press forward with goals of full employment, better housing, excellence in education and rebuilding the cities, but added, "We are approaching the limits of what government alone can do."

The greatest need, he said, "is to reach beyond government, to enlist the legions of the concerned and the committed."

"We have found ourselves

rich in goods but ragged in spirit: reaching with magnificent precision for the moon, but falling into raucous discord here on earth," he said.

The Chief Executive said the answer to the crisis will be found in such simple virtues as "goodness, decency, love, kindness."

"In these difficult years, America has suffered from a fever of words," Nixon contended, "from inflated rhetoric that promises more than it could possibly deliver; from angry rhetoric that fans discontents into hatreds, from bombastic rhetoric that postures instead of persuading."

"We cannot learn from one another until we stop shouting at one another—until we speak quietly enough so that our words can be heard as well as our voices," he added.

At the same time, Nixon seemed to hint that portions of President Johnson's Great Society programs will be continued.

He promised to "press urgently forward" toward such goals as rebuilding cities, providing better housing, strengthening education, protecting the environment and seeking full employment.

Citing his inaugural motto, Nixon said all must go forward together if any is to advance.

"No man can be fully free while his neighbor is not," he said.

"This means black and white together as one nation, not two," the President declared. "The laws have caught up with our conscience. What remains is to give light to what is in the law: To ensure at last that all are born equal in dignity before God, all are born equal in dignity before man."

Nixon's principal emphasis clearly was on the search for peace.

"For the first time, because the people of the world want peace and the leaders are afraid of war, the times are on the side of peace," he said.

To help make the world safe for mankind, he added, "is our summons to greatness."

As in the past, Nixon asserted that "after a period of confrontation, we are entering an era of negotiation. Let all nations know that during this administration our lines of communication will be open. We seek an open world—open to ideas, open to the exchange of goods and people, a world in which no people, great or small, will live in angry isolation."

These words seemed to suggest Nixon will at least consider resuming ties with mainland China and, perhaps, with Communist Cuba.

"We cannot expect to make everyone our friends, he said, "but we can try to make no one our enemy."

The new President invited would-be adversaries to join in a peaceful competition: "Let us cooperate to reduce the burden of arms, to strengthen the structure of peace, to lift up the poor and the hungry."

Adding a note of caution, he said: "But to all who would be tempted by weakness, let us leave no doubt that we will be as strong as we need to be, as long as we need to be."

Nixon declared, "I know that peace does not come through wishing for it—that there is no substitute for days and even years of patient and prolonged diplomacy."

But, he emphasized, "I add this sacred commitment: I shall consecrate my office, my energies and all the wisdom I can summon to the cause of peace among nations."

Because the nation is strong, he said, it can afford to size up its weaknesses with candor and approach them with hope.

"We are caught in war, wanting peace," he said. "We are torn by division, wanting unity. We see around us empty lives, wanting fulfillment. We see jobs that need doing, waiting for hands to do them."

To meet these problems, he continued, "we need only to look within ourselves. Greatness comes in simple things. The simple things are the ones most needed today if we are to surmount what divides us and to cement what unites us."

For the government's part, he promised, his administration will listen to the voices of anguish and despair.

He said: "Those who have been left out, we will try to bring in. Those left behind, we will help to catch up."

"For all of our people we will set as our goal the decent order that makes progress possible and our lives secure."

Once again, he emphasized the work of his administration will not involve tearing down in any wholesale fashion the programs of the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

"As we reach our hopes," he said, "our task is to build on what has gone before—not turning away from the old, but turning toward the new."

But Nixon suggested government's capacity for dealing with many of the major domestic problems is limited.

Noting that in the last third of a century "government has passed more laws, spent more money, initiated more programs, than in all our previous history," Nixon said: "... we are approaching the limits of what government alone can do."

"What has to be done, has to be done by government and people together or it will not be done at all. The lesson of past agony is that without the people we can do nothing; with the people we can do anything."

Agnew Also Takes an Oath, Vows to Help Nation's Cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spiro T. Agnew, who helped his Greek immigrant father hawk vegetables on Baltimore streets during the Depression, took the oath of office today to become the nation's 39th vice president.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen administered the oath in the sonorous tones for which he is noted, minutes before Richard M. Nixon was sworn in as President.

Agnew's hand rested on his eldest daughter Pamela's white-covered, King James version Bible. It was opened at the 100th Psalm—the vice president's favorite—which reads in part: "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord."

The 50-year-old Agnew, whose father's name was Anagnostopoulos, rose to the nation's second highest elected office from Baltimore County executive, then governor of Maryland.

He was the first man since Henry Wallace in 1940 to become vice president without serving in Congress, aides said.

Agnew, in an inaugural-evening conference, said he looks forward to tackling the problems of urban America and indicated he would have a major announcement about those problems in America's largest city soon.

"I recently had a long talk with New York City Mayor John Lindsay," Agnew told his first news conference in several weeks, "and we will have an important announcement about that later."

Agnew said he would primarily devote his energies to problems of the cities, but he said he hoped to move gradually into foreign policy matters.

Agnew said the inaugural ceremonies are more than a celebration of the accomplishments of any one man. "It is a rededication to our highest ideals of government. Only in the United States is the transfer of power done with such lucidity and with so little rancor."

The son of a Greek restaurateur, Agnew grew up during the Depression in which he watched his father's business fail. At one point young Agnew helped his father sell vegetables on the streets of Baltimore.

True to form, Johnson spent Sunday, his final full day as President, working for hours in his office cleaning up some final details.

He went to church in the morning. The Marine Corps band came by later to serenade him while the Johnsons stood on a balcony.

During the church service, the

Johnson arose at his usual time, about 7 a.m. He worked in the mansion, signing some executive orders. Aides said Johnson had completed his moving out of the presidential office in the west wing.

While Johnson has said he has looked forward to exchanging the 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. address of the White House for Ranch Road No. 1, Johnson City, Tex., his last days in office as 36th President have been filled with sentiment and expressions of good will.

"Show us the uses of our strengths that will make life better on this Earth for all Thy children. In season and out, help us to hold to the purpose Thou has taught us, feeding the hungry, healing the sick, caring for the needy, trusting our young, training them up in the way that they should go."

Johnson's last day as President was a busy one. He spent much of the day in the White House, signing executive orders and reviewing documents.

Hickel Wins OK as Member of Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Interior Committee approved today, by a 14-3 vote, the controversial nomination of Gov. Walter J. Hickel of Alaska as secretary of the interior in the Nixon administration.

The endorsement, hard won by Hickel in five days of committee scrutiny, came less than two hours before the presidential inauguration of Richard M. Nixon.

The other 11 new Cabinet members had won declared or tacit approval of various Senate committees without major difficulty last week.

Most appointments were due to go to the floor for confirmation today.

Chairman Henry J. Jackson, D-Wash., of the Interior Committee said Hickel's nomination would not be acted upon by the Senate until Tuesday at the earliest.

Jackson said the committee still had to complete the record on Hickel's financial interests, which were a key point during extended committee deliberations.

The governor has promised to divest himself of all holdings that could raise a conflict of interest, Jackson said.

The Hickel nomination was Legitimate Theater's Loss Filmdom's Gain

Critic Hazard of Stage Work Turns Top
Director John Dexter to Movie Fields

The notorious hazards of the "here today, gone tomorrow" legitimate theater, where a couple of critics can turn an opening night into a closing, have just handed film folk an unforeseen dividend. Their fringe benefit comes in the form of the "happy work" philosophy of John Dexter, top stage director, whose first movie is "The Virgin Soldiers," new Columbia-Carl Foreman presentation.

Dexter's thought is quite simple. Though he has more than the usual share of stage hits under his belt, he can't forget the sudden death that greets so many plays; therefore, he has always believed his cast and crew should — as a minimum — be happy while they work, so that "if the opening night was a flop, I knew that everyone had enjoyed themselves at least during the rehearsals."

Transfers Easily
This was easily translated into movie-making terms during "The Virgin Soldiers" long location stay in Singapore, despite 100-degree heat and the rigorous business of shooting in rugged terrain.

What may have made it especially easy was Dexter's love for his work — "I count myself lucky." He kept in mind, the director said the other day, that "the main thing is that cast and crew and I must enjoy ourselves. It's merely the same rule I've applied for years in the theater."

His task was made a bit of a cinch, says Dexter, by the lusty, lighthearted "Virgin Soldiers" script, as well as its intriguing study of human relationships (which happens to be why it's the first film assignment, of scores offered him, that lured Dexter from the stage).

Had Many Hits
He has directed such theatrical hits as "Royal Hunt of the Sun," "Othello" (starring Sir Laurence Olivier), "Chips with Everything," "Half a Sixpence" (with Tommy Steele) and "Black Comedy" (with Lynn Redgrave). But there were early frustrations, like wanting to be an actor, and feeling "I didn't have a posh enough accent."

Now, in his own straightforward, very clear accent, Dexter puts himself in firm opposition to the old-line, whip-cracking director type whose actors

New Book Tells Story of the Kennedys

The Story of the KENNEDYS

The Kennedys have had it all. From hunger in Ireland to realization, three generations later, of the American Dream. Wealth. Position. Power. And they have seen the dream become nightmare. The violence done them by fate is cruel enough. But the violence done them by the dark side of the human mind has appalled the nation and the world. The story of this American family, what has been given it and what has been taken from it, is as fantastic as it is frightening. Once before the Associated Press has chronicled a shocking tragedy of this afflicted family in "The Torch Is Passed", one of the largest selling books of all time, and the classic account of the assassination of President Kennedy. Now, in a time of national shock and sympathy, the AP is producing another book on this fated family. It is called "Triumph and Tragedy: The Story of the Kennedys." Many of those who wrote "The Torch Is Passed" are at work on the new project. It will be a hard-bound book fully illustrated in color and black and white, a fitting memoir of one of the most shocking personal and public tragedies of American history. To reserve your copy, send only $3 now to "Triumph and Tragedy" in care of this newspaper. The book will be mailed you just as soon as it is available.

Rural Poverty Studied Often; Nothing Is Done

BY SYLVIA PORTER

Meet one of your neighbors: The family includes eight children, from pre-schoolers to post-adolescents, lives at the end of a dirt road, well out of sight of its more affluent neighbors. The family's home is nestled among assorted junk cars, old ice boxes, rusty bicycles. There is no indoor plumbing, and, therefore, little opportunity for baths. The heating consists of one small wood-burning stove although the weather may fall below zero. There is a used car which has been bought on credit but which is inoperable because the family has no money for repairs. The family breadwinner does have a part-time job, but he usually doesn't turn up for work because his work place is miles away and his car won't run.

There is a TV set and a fairly generous supply of whiskey for the adults. Frequently, the children do not go to school either because they do not have suitable clothes or because the weather is too bad for them to walk the miles to the nearest school bus stop.

Your neighbor? In all probability, yes, if you live in the exurbs, in almost any rural area in the U.S. or even in

Be Creative by Using String Painting to Produce Designs

BY CAPPY DICK

Have you ever tried string painting? You can make lots of interesting pictures. Here's how: Get out your poster paints, a sheet of typewriter paper and some ordinary cotton string.

Dip Cord in Paint yard long. Holding the strings at one end, dip the cords into a jar or tray of paint as the boy is doing in figure 1. If the paint is too thick, pour a little into a saucer, add some water to thin it, then dip the strings.

Still holding the strings at one end, run the thumb and forefinger of your other hand down the length of the cords to squeeze out all the paint you can. Then lay the two strings on one half of the folded paper, looping and twisting them to cover as much of the page as possible.

Prepare two additional strings the same way, but with a contrasting color of paint. Loop these strings over the first pair, some suburbs. My description (of an actual family living within a few miles of thousands of well-to-do citizens) may not precisely fit your neighbor living in rural poverty but it's close enough. The point is that this family is almost certainly there, only a few miles from your home. And you are not aware of its existence because it members do not even display themselves to their not too distant neighbors and there has

Effeminate Boy Needs Care of Psychologist

By George C. Thosteson, M. D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson, I have a grandson who is very feminine. I have tried in vain to make my son and his wife realize that they should do something about it.

He is 6 now, and ever since he could walk and talk, I have been harping on it. He started going around with his mother's high heels on all the time until finally I got my son to put a stop to it.

When he plays house with other children, he always wants to be the "mommy," and drapes himself with his mother's jewelry and clothes. He has said from time to time that he would like to be a girl. I could go on but I think I have made my point.

Can you help me make them realize they should do something before it is too late, that I am not picking on him, but want to help him?—Mrs. M. L.

This isn't a physical problem. It is emotional, or psychological. I agree that you are not picking on the child; he does indeed need help before it is too late. Several factors can be involved. Is this an only child? Did the mother want a girl? Do the parents treat him like a girl?

A small child is not aware of his own sex. He gradually learns it. Parental attitudes are important. If the mother wanted a girl and refuses to accept the child as a boy, how does one expect the youngster to react? In some cases parents even use a feminine nickname; the mother may be reluctant to let a boy get a boy's haircut; may think it's "cute" and thus encourage his feminine ways. In this case, mother should have stopped this boy's behavior long ago.

From the psychiatric standpoint, one possibility is that she may have a deep-seated hostility towards men and vents it era to publicize their plight. One year ago, a National Advisory Commission on Rural Poverty declared this problem a "national disgrace." Since then, there has been a flow of studies and seminars on rural poverty. But little has been done and the facts remain:

— While our rural population is less than 30 per cent of our total, 46 per cent of the nation's poor — 19 million — live in rural areas. Most of the reductions in our poverty population refer to the urban, not rural, poor.

Fact of Life — The average income of the U.S. farm worker in 1968 was less than $1,800 and of the migrant farm worker, well below even this sub-poverty level. Except for workers on big commercial farms, farm workers have neither collective bargaining rights nor minimum wage law coverage.

— For American Indians and Eskimos, poverty is a universal fact of life.

Rural America continues to offer grossly inadequate educational-vocational opportunities to its youngsters and abysmally low salaries to teachers. Only about one in five trainees in federal job training and anti-poverty programs comes from rural areas.

— And almost unbelievably, some 60 per cent of the rural youth who are enrolled in rural vocational and technical schools are studying agriculture — where there are probably the fewest decent job opportunities for them in the foreseeable future.

Among the fascinating proposals of the Rural Poverty Commission is for a nationwide system of rural "development districts," each with its own existing or potential hub of industry, culture and education. The districts would pool resources, talent and money.

Among President-elect Nixon's pledges is that he will give high priority to the problems of the invisible poor in rural America and that he will seek ways to attract industries to the rural areas.

The two points mesh and the vital aspect is that they demand not huge infusions of money but, instead, ample allotments of imagination, innovation and ingenuity. Surely it is time for action.

UAW Protests OSU Expulsion of Negro Students

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Oshkosh State University is being urged by the Fair Employment Practices Committee of the United Auto Workers to reinstate Negro students who were removed from school after a destructive demonstration Nov. 21.

The committee said Sunday it had adopted a resolution, accusing the university and the state universities system's regents of acting capriciously by expelling students after they had been suspended.

More than 90 Negro students were suspended by the school after demonstrators caused an estimated $12,000 damage in a campus administration building. Regents voted a month later to expell 90 until next summer, and to suspend others until the end of the current term.

The committee said its letter of complaint would be mailed to the school and the regents. It said the resolution was adopted unanimously.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Embroidered Cotton Leather — It's New!

A striking new fabric — embroidered cotton leather — will be offered for home sewing use this spring.

The National Cotton Council reports that the coated cotton leather comes embroidered in several different designs.

There's a bold plaid design, a paisley, and a number of florals, including a border pattern.

One unusual version has the cotton leather cut out in diamond shapes, then embroidered to a backing of duck. This fabric has been made into a stunning all-weather coat by one manufacturer.

The new embroidered leather is said to be both washable and dry-cleanable. Moreover, it's lightweight and recommended for easy sewing.

Your Problems

Better Not Bring Friend Home for Dinner

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Tell "Black Lace Trouble," the woman whose husband asked her to serve him breakfast in the baby-doll outfit he brought from Atlantic City, that she should be thankful she can still interest him.

When I read about people like that, I count my blessings. Peggy and I just celebrated our 25th wedding anniversary, and we are still as excited about each other as we were the day we married.

I never know what I'll find when I come home to dinner. One night Peggy will greet me at the door wearing a bikini, the next night it could be a floor length evening gown, or panties and bra. Tonight she was topless. Heaven knows what tomorrow will bring. Peggy is so full of little surprises life never gets dull around our house. I'm one of the luckiest fellows alive and I know it.

I'd like to surprise Peggy with this letter in the paper. Be a pal, Ann. She reads you every day. — Ned

Dear Ned: Well, you two do love surprises, don't you? How nice! Please don't surprise Peggy by bringing home an old school chum for dinner, Bub. He might get the surprise of his life!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My favorite subject is Latin. When I tell this to my friends they look at me as if I am crazy. Just today somebody said, "I wouldn't take Latin for all the money in the world. It's a dead language." I must admit I've never heard people talking to each other in Latin, the way they do in Spanish or French, but Latin helps people understand all languages. For example, I understand English a lot better because I know some Latin. In the past two years my vocabulary has increased tremendously.

Kids don't pay much attention to what I say, but they listen to Ann Landers, so please say something good about Latin. Thank you. — A Latin Lover

Dear Lover: Your letter hit me where it hurt. If I could live my high school years over, the one thing I would do differently would be to take Latin. I ducked it because I, too, thought it was a dead language, and I have regretted it ever since.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 13-year-old daughter is adopted. Lynn knows she was a Chosen Child. We took your advice 10 years ago and told her. What I need to know now is this: People keep mentioning the fact (and often in her presence) that

Miss Hepburn, Psychiatrist Wed In Switzerland

Madame Denise Rattaz, mayor of Morges, performed the civil ceremony in a dimly lit room crowded with some 40 guests. Hundreds of spectators waited outside during the 10-minute ceremony before the couple emerged, smiling, and waved to the crowd. Miss Hepburn looked radiant in a pink high-neck cashmere dress with matching hood.

Police Escort Police protected the couple as they entered a limousine to go to the reception.

An elderly street trader managed to make his way to their car and offered the 39-year-old actress a bunch of garlic as a good luck token. She lowered the car window and accepted it.

The reception was held at the home of actor Yul Brynner not far from Miss Hepburn's villa in nearby Toiranchaz.

It was the second marriage for Miss Hepburn, a Protestant whose 12-year marriage to American actor Mel Ferrer ended in divorce last November.

Son Attends Their 7-year old son Sean attended the wedding.

It was the first marriage for Dotti, a Roman Catholic. A spokesman said there would be no church wedding.

Women Honored for Taste in Furnishings

The Living Room in the James Ward home in Chicago is a first home category winner. The young couple's house was built in the 19th century in Old Town section of that city by a German craftsman. Mrs. Ward describes her living room as a place of "dignity," yet informal enough for friends to drape themselves over the chairs in blue jeans. Every item in the room has great sentimental meaning to the Wards from the marble-top table that came from a prison to the original Chippendale mirror over the fireplace. Red and brown velvet chairs and draperies meld into the colors of the rosy oriental rug.

It was "a salute to the American woman's taste in the furnishing of her home" when Burlington House Award winners were announced at the recent International Home Furnishing Market in Chicago. The awards, the first of their kind, will be an annual event.

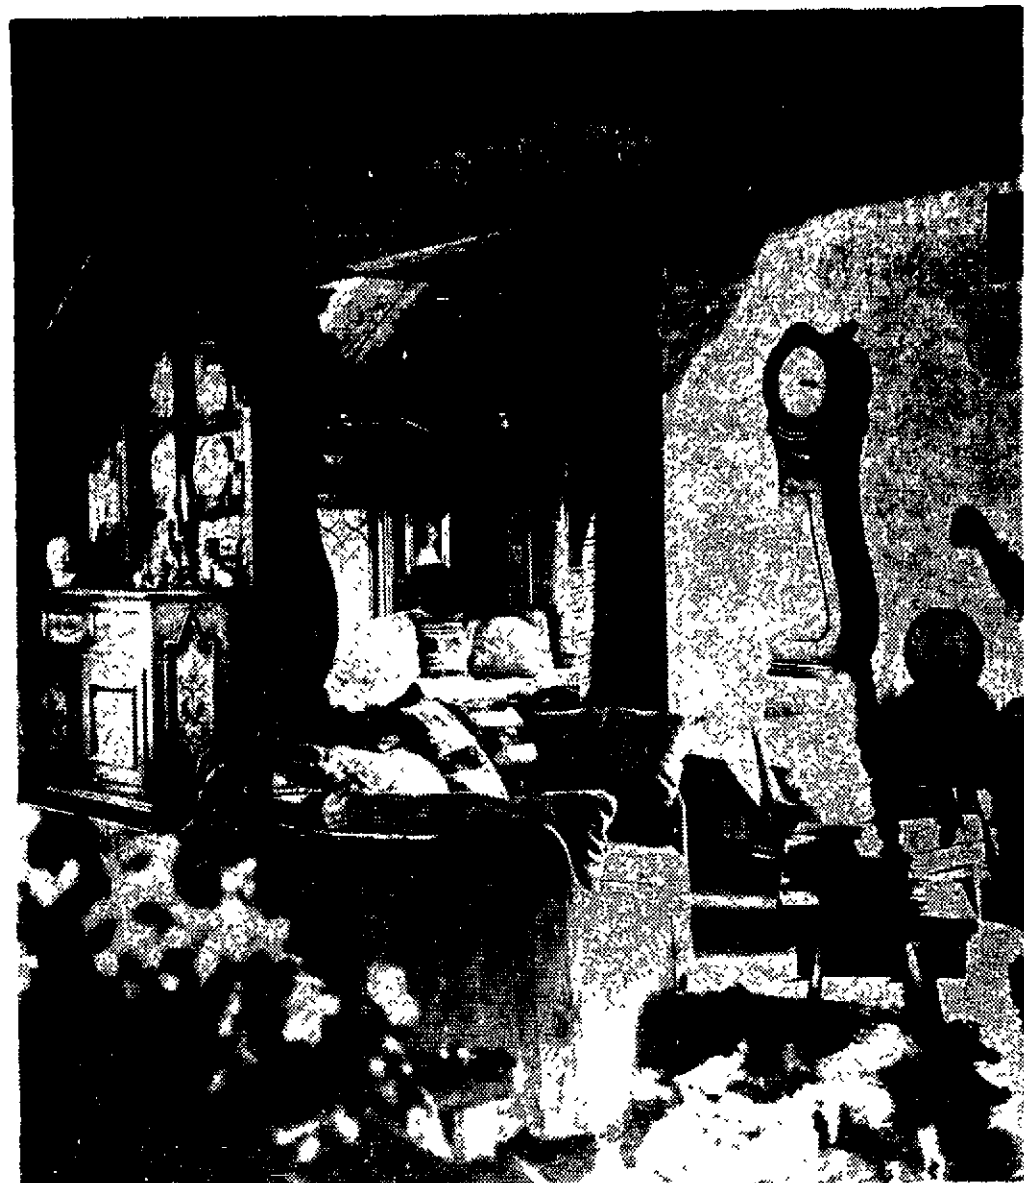

In the 10 major categories, 17 homes representing a wide cross-section of the country and many types of interiors were named winners.

The homes had been submitted to Burlington House during the past six months by newspaper and magazine editors. Some had already been published; others had never been photographed. The 17 were chosen from over 500 entries by a group of prominent women who are known for their own taste.

The judges represented all corners of the U.S. including New York City; Los Angeles, Calif.; Atlanta, Ga.; Houston, Tex.; Honolulu, Hawaii, and Lake Forest, Ill.

Winning homes were chosen on the basis of taste, imagination and artful solution of problems. Each winner will receive an engraved sterling silver frame containing a photograph of her home.

Part of the program also included special awards for U.S. Embassy Residences abroad. To these winners will go a scholarship check for a student in her foreign post.

The Custom-Made look of woods — all hand-treated, hand-carved and some of them hand-painted in a Scandinavian folk art design — in the living room of Mrs. Leo Simpson Black's unusual home in Bainbridge Island, Wash. The entire house, which looks out on Mount Rainier, is made of wood. Surfaces are treated; pillow and fabrics are of hand-woven Swedish textiles. The house reflects the lumber industry in which Mrs. Black's late husband was a prominent figure in the Northwest.

The Corner of the master bedroom of Mrs. Lowell S. Dillingham's home in Honolulu, Hawaii, shows her desk-work area and a quilted, flowered chintz lounge chair and ottoman with matching curved valance at the window. Mrs. Dillingham's antique French needle-point rack sits in one corner. Every room in the house has a view of Honolulu from its mountain top setting.

Mrs. J. O. Lambert's apartment in Dallas, Tex., was named a winner for "the artful use of the accessory." Her large living room is labeled "North Africa," because of the many treasures collected in that country. One of the greatest places for displaying bibelots is the oversized coffee table made from old Egyptian doors. A modern lucite sculpture box mixes happily with a Moroccan copper "mint tea service" from many years ago and an enormous Irish crystal covered jar which is usually filled with lemon and limes.

Miss Kathryn Hays' own bedroom in her home in Roxbury, Conn., is lined with mellow wood and dominated by a tester bed. She departs drastically from the Early American look for her bedcovers — sheets printed with giant flowers in bright green and red and a blanket in strong gold. The string canopy she made when she was immobilized by a broken leg; the headboard collage of clock parts is her work, too.

Preventive Measures Reduce Spread of Infectious Disease

Will your precautions be too late and too late for your family this winter? It can be a sorry season for the family that does not take advantage of preventive measures, such as the effective vaccines provided by medical laboratories against infectious diseases, says the Council on Family Health. And it can be a season of pain and unhappiness for the family that has no sound home nursing plans, advises the Council.

Spread of Disease

Winter weather favors the spread of communicable disease, chiefly because you are indoors more. In confined spaces there is greater risk of exposure to droplet spray contamination from those who are sneezing and coughing. What are some effective health care measures that the average family can use this winter?

Take advantage of the immunizations available from your doctor. Check family records to determine which member needs a vaccination or booster shots. In addition to preventive medicine, cleanliness habits are important. Children should be taught to wash their hands after going to the bathroom, before meals, before handling foods. Frequent baths help keep the skin healthy and clean. Each family member should have his own towels, toilet articles and cosmetics and they should not be shared.

Practice some of the professional health-care antiseptic principles when nursing a sick member of the family. Wash hands in hot water before and after contact with the patient.

If a member of your family has a communicable disease, keep his dishes and cutlery separate from those used by the rest of the family. Sterilize eating implements by boiling in hot water.

If chemical antiseptics and disinfectants are used, read the label and follow directions. Store containers out of sight and reach of little children.

When removing soiled bed linen, fold the contaminated side to the inside. Keep linen away from the face and handle it by the edges and corners. It is best to launder the soiled linen separately.

Sheinwold Make Sure Of Discard To Triumph

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD
Almost all experts in the United States use the weak opening two-bid. An opening bid of two spades, two hearts or two diamonds shows a strong six-card suit in a hand that is not quite worth an ordinary bid of one. (The opening bid of two clubs, reserved for all very powerful hands, will be our subject next week.)

South's opening bid of two hearts is a typical example of the weak two-bid. If South passed, West would open with one club and would rebid in spades. East and West would bid at least two or three spades, perhaps even four. West would make 10 tricks at spades, setting up the diamonds to get rid of his two low clubs. South is far better playing the hand at two hearts, which may well be the case if both East and West are conservative customers. What's more, South can even make his part score by careful play.

West opens the king of spades, and East signals encouragement by playing the nine. West continues spades, and South ruffs the third round. Now South must immediately lead a club, postponing the trumps until a more convenient time.

Finesse Works
West plays a low club, and South tries a finesse with dummy's ten. Luck is with declarer, for East must use the king to win the trick. East shifts to a diamond, but it is too late. South wins with the king of diamonds and leads his other club. West steps up with the ace of clubs and leads another diamond to dummy's ace. Declarer is now in position to lead the queen of clubs to get rid of his last diamond.

At last the time has come to lead trumps. Declarer leads the ten of hearts from dummy. East wins with the ace of hearts and leads another diamond, but South ruffs with the king of hearts and draws trumps with the queen and jack.

Daily Question
Partner opens with two hearts (a weak two-bid), and the next player passes. You hold: S-Q 9 7 12, H-A 5, D-Q 10 9 8, C-K 9 6. What do you say?
Answer: Pass. Partner has less than an ordinary opening bid, and so do you. If you both had opening bids, you would have a game. Since you both have less, the chances are that you can make only eight or nine tricks.

2 Injured in Accidents on County Roads

Two women suffered minor injuries in separate Outagamie County traffic accidents Saturday.
Janice Hughes, 913 S. Matthias St., Appleton, was injured when her car and one driven by Patricia S. Johnson, 44 Fairway Court, collided at Lilas Drive and State 125, a mile west of Appleton.

County police said the Hughes car was northbound on Lilas Drive, entering State 125, and the Johnson auto was eastbound on 125.
Illa Mae Buman, route 2, Black Creek, suffered a foot injury in a three-car accident on State 47, five miles north of Appleton.

She was in a car driven by Carol Weber, rural Menasha, who was southbound on 47.
Police said Ralph E. Lorenz, 35, route 1, Black Creek, was northbound on 47 when his pickup truck was involved in a collision with a car driven by James S. Heenan, 67, route 1, Appleton, who had pulled out on 47 from Wege Road. The Heenan car was pushed into the oncoming Weber auto.
Damage to the three vehicles totaled about $650.

Little Chute Man Fined $5 After Family Row
LITTLE CHUTE — Dennis Nietz, 27, 818 Adams St., Little Chute, pleaded guilty of drunk and disorderly conduct and was fined $5 by Municipal Justice Raymond Sanders Friday night.
Nietz was arrested at his home early Friday after causing a disturbance. The complaint was made by his wife, who has started divorce proceedings. Police had to use a chemical spray to subdue the man when they took him to the county jail.

Polltaker Will Ask Residents About TV Sets

Fox Cities area residents will be asked about the television sets in their homes as part of a nationwide survey this week conducted through the Bureau of the Census office in St. Paul. The questions are aimed at determining the proportion of households in the United States with television sets, the proportion with color sets, and the proportion with sets which can receive UHF. Answers to these questions help government and business in decisions affecting the establishment of new broadcasting facilities.

The TV questions supplement the Bureau's regular monthly employment survey which provides data to the U.S. Department of Labor for updating national employment figures.

Willing Prisoner Must Pay Fine Or Return to Cell

A 35-year-old Menasha man who last Wednesday got his wish when he came to the Outagamie County Jail and asked to be locked up, this morning was fined $35 and costs or eight days in jail for public intoxication.
Kenneth Barth, who gave a Menasha hotel address, pleaded guilty in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.
Sheriff Calvin L. Spice brought the charge against Barth after the Menasha man came to the jail about 12:15 a.m. Jan. 15 and asked to be jailed. He was told to leave several times, but when he refused, authorities granted his wish. He was in jail under bond until his court appearance today.

The court was told that Barth was "highly intoxicated" when he came to the jail.

Schaefer Resumes Projects Cut in Row

Clerk Hiring Permits Conferences, Traffic School, Judge Claims

Outagamie County Judge Nick Schaefer said he will again start making use of traffic safety school, programmed programs cut early in November through the Appleton Technical Institute, and will again start holding pre-trial conferences, a program he initiated shortly after taking office last April.

Man Crushed By Snow Plow

Bear Creek Man's Condition Critical After Mishap Today

George Knudsen, 65, route 1, Bear Creek, was critically injured about mid-morning today when he slipped under the rear wheels of an Outagamie County snowplow near his home.

County police, who were notified of the accident about an hour after it occurred, said Knudsen apparently suffered multiple fractures to the pelvic area and possible internal injuries. He was taken to New London Community Hospital by ambulance, where he reportedly is in "critical" condition.

Although complete details of the accident were not available, Knudsen reportedly slipped under the wheels of the snowplow which was plowing his driveway. The highway department plow reportedly crossed over the lower part of his body. Knudsen reportedly has one artificial leg.

His home is located along Oak Road, a quarter mile north of State 76. County police were continuing investigation into the accident early this afternoon.

Police Investigating Break-in at Appleton

Appleton detectives late this morning were continuing investigation into a weekend burglary at Crescent Electric Motor Service, Inc., 1727 N. Richmond St.

The burglary was reported about 8 a.m. today by a co-owner of the business when he reported to work. Police said entry was gained by breaking a side window.

Between $50 and $100 was taken from an unlocked filing cabinet in the main office.

Corn Available

Game Birds Face Starvation

BY DAVE WEITZ Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Hungarian partridge and pheasants face starvation in the Fox River Valley.

Heavy snows, sleet and rain have crusted the normally open feeding areas of the birds.

Free corn is being distributed throughout the Fox River Valley by the Bureau of Natural Resources to conservationists feeding the "Huns" and pheasants.

Dennis Hohlfeider, state forester in Appleton said he received about 600 pounds of cob corn Thursday for Outagamie County.

Hohlfeider is distributing the corn from his home at the intersection of School and Greenwood roads.

Although ruffed grouse also exist in limited numbers in the area they are eating the buds of spruce trees and are only slightly affected by the ice-crust.

Jerry Rieckhoff, district game manager for Winnebago, Waupaca and Outagamie counties said the feeding program is not new but is important to survival of the upland game this year.

He said about 35 tons of corn have been distributed in the three-county district this winter. When heavy snows and freezing rain occur many birds would not survive without the corn he said.

He cautioned, however, that well-meaning persons may do more harm than good if they feed birds only for a short time. Birds congregate at feeding areas and depend on hand-outs. When feeding is discontinued birds often will remain and starve.

Grit also is necessary for the birds. The grit which is available free at most corn distribution stations enables birds to digest their food.

Pheasants normally congregate in "wintering areas" according to Rieckhoff. He said this occurs because birds seek the most sheltered areas and best supply of food. State tagging studies have indicated the birds move as much as two and three miles into wintering areas annually. Pheasants will winter several years in a row at the same general area.

About 45 pheasants were recently seen along Capitol Drive in Appleton.

Rieckhoff said such flocks of pheasants are not uncommon and added that flocks exceeding 200 birds have been observed in Wisconsin.

Critical Period Although winters in the Fox River Valley present problems for game birds they are less critical than spring hatching seasons he said.

Rieckhoff said modern

Buckley Seeking Opinion on School Board, Mayor Posts

The state attorney general's office is being pressed for an opinion on whether the mayor of a Wisconsin city can also serve on the board of education.

Mayor George Buckley of Appleton, who earlier in the month announced his candidacy and took out nomination papers for school board, said today he has been in contact with the office in Madison.

He asked for an informal opinion two weeks ago after City Atty David Geenen said the position of school board member would be incompatible with that of mayor. Geenen also thought Buckley, if elected, would have to give up his position as mayor if he decided to serve on the school board.

Candidacy Legal There is no question as to the legality of the mayor running for a school post, however.

Buckley, noting the deadline for filing papers is eight days off, said he has asked that the opinion be expedited.

The mayor was told an assistant attorney general had finished the opinion last week but

Tape Recorder, About $70 Cash Taken in Burglary

About $70 in cash and an $80 tape recorder were taken in a weekend burglary at Badger Metals, Inc., 221 E. Atlantic St.

Appleton police said entry into the building was gained by breaking a door glass. Burglars used company tools to pry open a first floor safe which contained records but no money. Drawers and filing cabinets in the safe were ransacked.

Police said about $40 in petty cash was missing as was $22 from a stamp and coffee fund. About $10 was taken from cold drink and candy vending machines which were pried open.

The burglars made an unsuccessful attempt to enter a large, second floor safe.

Empty soda bottles, spilled coffee, and discarded candy wrappers indicated the burglars had lunch in the building, police said.

County Supervisors Cost Outagamie $53,089 in '68

Outagamie County supervisors collected $48,627 during 1968 for attending county board and committee meetings and $4,462 in travel expenses to get to those meetings.

Oshkosh, Menasha Omitted

Mayors to Attend Formalization of Alliance of Cities

Oshkosh and Menasha may be the only major communities in the Fox Valley not represented at the incorporation meeting of the Alliance of Cities at Madison Jan. 31, it was learned today.

In the meantime, mayors and city managers from Fond du Lac, Neenah, Appleton, Green Bay, Sheboygan and Manitowoc are making plans to attend.

For the past 18 months, the Alliance has been an informal organization, expressing the views of Wisconsin's 20 largest cities on urban problems.

"Major Role"

"I definitely plan to attend the formal organizational meeting because the Alliance of Cities will have a major role to play during the current session of the Legislature if we are to get anything that will help take the heavy load off the local property taxpayer," Appleton's Mayor George Buckley said today.

Buckley said he has asked Finance Director David Champion to accompany him to the session, which has the makings of being a controversial one in the light of recent developments.

The meeting is expected to be boycotted by Oshkosh on the basis of a statement last week by City Manager Angus Crawford that officials there are opposed to making the Alliance a corporation, and to setting up a full-time paid staff.

Over Lapping Effort

Crawford took the position that, because cities and villages already belong to the Wisconsin League of Municipalities, there would be overlapping of effort and administrative costs.

While Oshkosh was among the original cities responding to the call for formation of the Alliance late in 1967, it has not been represented at most meetings held over the past year.

Another doubtful participant is Mayor John Klein of Menasha, a director of the League of Municipalities, who said recently he doesn't think his city council will authorize formal membership.

Both Neenah and Menasha were invited to participate in Alliance activities a year ago when they expressed interest in membership.

The criteria for membership when the Alliance was first informally organized called for admittance of cities with 20,000 or more population.

However, under the proposed articles of incorporation, any city may join.

Mayor Donald Hassler of Neenah said last week he definitely feels there is a place for such an organization, putting him in opposition to his Menasha counterpart.

The Jan. 31 meeting is expected to pull out a few cities which have been reluctant to play a strong role part in pushing for favorable legislation

State Senate To Air Zuehlke Appointment

Appleton Banker Picked by Knowles For Review Board

Special to The Post-Crescent

MADISON — Gov. Warren P. Knowles' appointment of an Appleton man to the state banking review board will be aired Wednesday afternoon at a Senate Labor, Taxation, Insurance and Banking Committee hearing.

Gus A. Zuehlke, president of the Appleton State Bank, is among eight Knowles' appointments to be considered during this first full week of activity of the 1969 Legislature.

Four bills and two constitutional amendments also will be aired.

One amendment would enable the state to contract public debt to improve land, waters, property, highways, buildings, equipment or facilities for public purposes. Another would prohibit payment by the state through dummy corporations, as is now done.

The appointments include Roger Heironimus, Phillips banker, as state banking commissioner, replacing William E. Nuesse, Madison. Others are Neil Johnston, Wausau, and Carl A. Schmitt, Milwaukee, investment board; Paul C. Kehrer, Watertown, and Henry Wozniak, West Allis, savings and loan review board; and Omer O. Nelson, Ashland, and Gerald J. Rink, Madison, consumer credit review board.

Hearings also will be held on the senate bill making it illegal for insurance companies to refuse to renew disability policies during loss or disability covered, and another senate bill changing mortality tables used in computing life estates and annuities.

Thursday's hearing will be on assembly bills to permit speed limit increases in school zones and require slow moving vehicles to display an emblem.

Strike's 26th Week Starts

Contractors' Dispute With Teamsters, Engineers Is Record

The longest strike in the history of the Fox Cities entered its 26th week today.

There is no settlement in sight for the walkout of Teamsters Local 563 and Operating Engineers Local 139 against the Fox Valley Contractor Material Suppliers Association. The association, comprised of seven ready mix and sand-gravel firms in the region, and unions continue to be at a standoff on conditions for a new contract.

The firms have been operating and the unions are picketing. However, this is the time of the year when construction is at a minimum. Because of the seasonal factor, there is speculation the strike will last into the spring, and possibly longer.

No talks are scheduled between the parties.

The strike started July 29.

There Will be Trouble for the Appleton Street Department next spring as this photo taken on St. Oneida Street clearly demonstrates. Winter is taking heavy toll and pockmarks in the pavement are common. Some holes, as shown here, are so deep that steel reinforcing rods beneath the pavement surface can be seen clearly. Pavement cracks are also showing up. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Legislative Uproar Promised Over Knowles Budget Deficit

MADISON (AP)—The political road which seemed so smooth last year for Republicans winds Tuesday into the 79th session of the Wisconsin Legislature where the Democratic minority has promised a clamor over a $25.9 million hole in the pavement.

While the GOP-controlled Senate and Assembly face the state government's most serious deficit problem since the Depression era, Democrats view the coming months as the opening round in the 1970 general election campaign.

Republican Gov. Warren P. Knowles won re-election Nov. 5, and the GOP retained control of the Legislature in an election campaign highlighted by their party's boasts that they adopted a $1.1 billion biennial budget in 1967 without burdening citizens with a tax increase.

This proud accomplishment was shattered Jan. 3 when Knowles' office officially predicted a deficit by June 30 of $25.9 million.

"Fraudulent Idea"

Democrats promptly accused Knowles of having known last year of the deficit, and of having kept it a secret to run "his campaign on the fraudulent idea that he had a balanced budget."

Democratic leaders held a news conference Jan. 7, declaring they plan to make the Republicans pay politically. One of them, minority leader Robert T. Huber, announced Thursday he was withdrawing from two key legislative committees to devote his time on the floor for "the many problems that will face the Legislature."

Former attorney general Bronson C. La Follette, beaten Nov. 5 in his campaign to deprive Knowles of a third term, described the deficit issue as "the kick-off of the 1970 campaign."

The state's constitutional offices become four-year jobs in 1970 instead of two, a feature that makes a Republican deficit embarrassment especially appetizing for Democrats, who currently don't have a single member in a top executive position.

To make a gloomy situation even more gloomy for Republicans, this year's legislative session is confronted with a record $1.7 billion in budget requests for the biennium beginning July 1.

Knowles said unexpected welfare costs produced the deficit in his no-tax-increase budget. Medicaid, the governor said, is to blame for more than a third of the projected deficit.

Yet it is small compared to the additional $456 million which Knowles said will be needed to maintain existing services to state agencies and local schools. The extra sum will be needed, he said, even if there are no new programs.

Taxes, therefore, may take the feature role in the Legislature's 1969 limelight, which Democrats presumably will keep burning as brightly as possible.

The governor has said an increase in the state income tax probably wouldn't handle the job. That leaves sales taxes as potential candidates.

And Democrats have reminded the GOP that they were framing the 1967-1969 budget for having inspired increases in local property taxes.

The Republicans' domination in the Legislature at least provides them with the political opportunity of showing they can respond to a deficit problem.

Knowles already has outlined an executive austerity program which an aide predicted could produce $25 million in savings by June 30 and virtually nullify the deficit. That was the same aide who last year forecast a surplus of $3 million.

Republicans open the session Tuesday afternoon with 52 members in the Assembly against 48 Democrats. They are masters of the Senate 23-10.

The GOP picked up two Senate seats in the Nov. 5 election. They didn't do as well in the Assembly elections as they had expected having opened the 1967 session with a 54-46 advantage.

Knowles is to deliver his budget and tax message to the lawmakers Jan. 30. Hearings on the state general fund budget probably will get underway by Feb. 11.

The governor himself might not be present when the 1969 Legislature concludes its response to the financial problems.

Knowles, 60, is reported to be in line for an appointment with the Nixon administration. GOP leaders in Madison insist, however, that the governor wouldn't resign his post until the budget and tax issues are resolved.

Panel Votes Down FAA Request

OSHKOSH — The Winnebago County Board backed the decision of its aviation committee today to turn down a Federal Aviation Authority offer to install immediately an ILS (instrument landing system) on the 6,700-foot north-south runway at Winnebago County Airport.

A shortage of FAA funds prompted a letter from the federal agency offering to install the ILS system at FAA expense in 1969. But this would leave the county paying the full cost for installing ILS for another 1,300 feet when the runway is extended to 8,000 feet, and also paying the full amount of the runway extension.

The FAA offered the county a three-part proposal:

—The FAA would install the ILS on the north-south runway in 1969 with the federal government paying the full cost, but leaving the cost of the landing system on any additional length for the county to pay.

—The county would pay the full construction cost of extending the runway another 1,300 feet.

—The county would grade the runway area this year for installation of the ILS.

The aviation committee recommended turning down all three propositions, chiefly since the county has asked the FAA to pay the full installation cost for an 8,000-foot runway.

Another reason is that an existing ILS system on the east-west runway is considered adequate for the present.

Plan for School Again Presented At Winneconne

WINNECONNE — A citizens committee of the Winneconne School District will take a careful look at a design of the district's proposed high school — the identical plan which voters refused to support in an early December referendum.

Virgil Wadleigh, superintendent of schools, said this morning the committee, comprised of close to 100 members, will meet on Jan. 29 with representatives of Thern Associates Inc., the Oshkosh architectural firm hired to design the facility.

The committee, Wadleigh said, will review the board's last two and a half years of preparation for the facility. It will also view 11 different designs submitted before the architect came up with its final $2.5 million plan.

By a wide margin, voters turned down the last design, which would have bonded the school district for 18 years in order to finance the school.

Great Danes Are Shot After Killing Chickens

REDMOND, Wash. (AP) — Two great danes were shot Sunday after they killed 400 chickens, injured many more and attacked the owner of a poultry farm near Redmond.

Dante Morelli, 29, said he shot the dogs just after one attacked his uncle, Tito Morelli, 72.

"If Dante hadn't been there with the shotgun, I'd have been dead," the elder Morelli said.

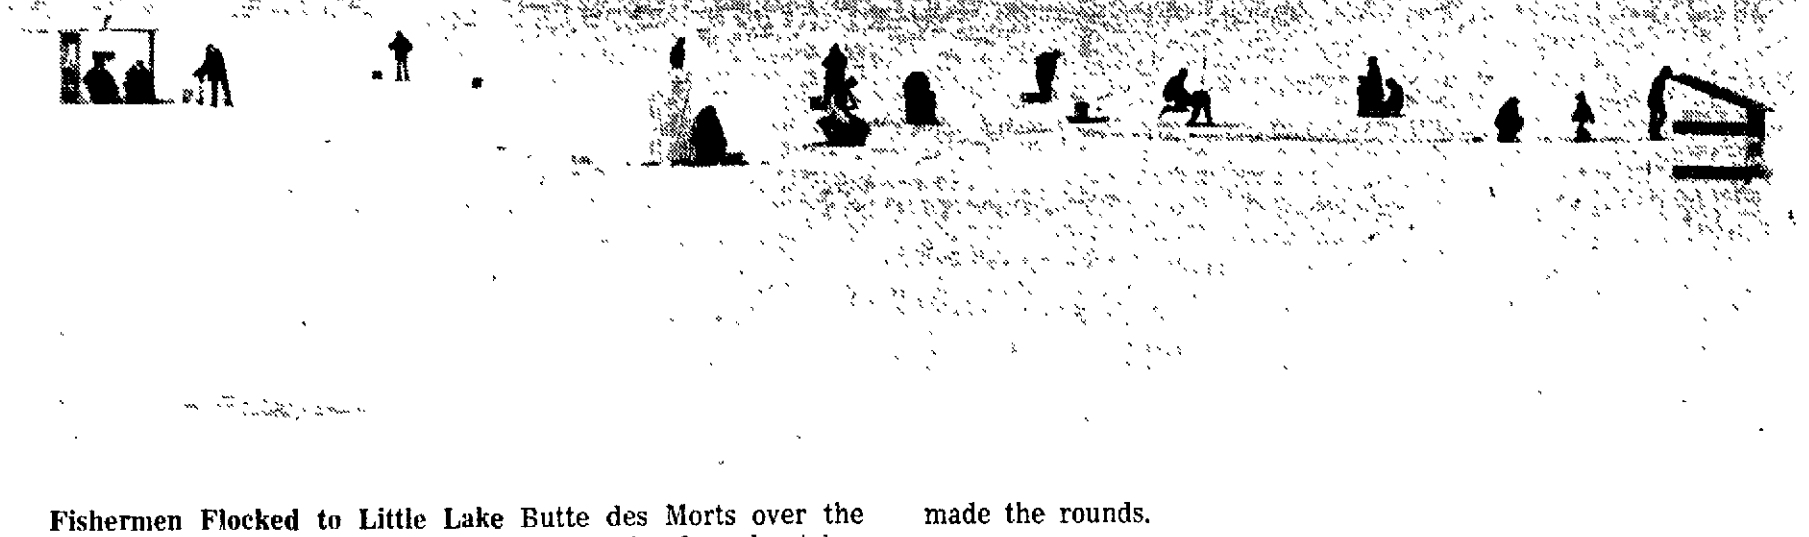

Tito Morelli was collecting eggs Sunday when he discovered the slaughter of the chickens and found the dogs in the chicken house.

LaFollette to Practice Law at Madison Firm

MADISON (AP) — Bronson C. La Follette, defeated in November in his bid for governor of Wisconsin, said today he will practice law in Madison.

He said he was returning to the firm of LaFollette, Snykin, Anderson, Davis and Abrahamson. He was with the firm before being elected attorney general in 1964.

The former Democratic official's uncle, former governor Phillip F. LaFollette, was associated with the law office until his death in 1965.

Twin Cities To be Hosts To State Elks

MENASHA — More than 500 Elks and their wives are expected here Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 and 2 for the annual mid-winter Wisconsin Elks Association conference.

Delegates from 38 member lodges in the state will be guests of Neenah-Menasha Lodge 676. They will be housed in various Twin City area hotels and motels and will hold business sessions in downtown Menasha locations during the conference period.

A prominent item on the agenda for the conference will be the newly-adopted state Elks project, a fund for research and treatment of cerebral palsy.

Each of the state organization's 29 operating committees also will meet and report to the full body during the sessions.

Leaders at the conference will include Jack G. Chriske, Green Bay, state president, who will conduct the sessions. Other officers participating will be Dr. Melville J. Junion, also of Green Bay, grand leading knight of the Grand Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and Fred L. Bohn, Zanesville, Ohio, a past exalted ruler and currently advisor to lodges in Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

Activities scheduled for the three days include registration and social activities Friday evening, Jan. 31, followed on Saturday by sessions by the committees in various locations in the city.

A noon luncheon for exalted rulers and secretaries and a tour of Bergstrom Art Center, Neenah, and luncheon at the Left Guard Charcoal House, Appleton, for the women, also are scheduled for Saturday, in addition to continuing registration during the day and evening social activities at the Elks Club.

The committee chairman will report Sunday morning with adjournment slated for noon.

December Parking Revenue Reached Record $19,632

No post-holiday hangovers for the Appleton Parking Commission.

Revenues for December set a $19,632 record for the month. Treasurer Ray Feuerstein reported today.

It also meant merchants in the downtown business district had their share of the action and shopping dollars.

Street collections (metered areas) totaled $8,021, and surface parking lots collected $1,769.

The East ramp led municipal parking structures with income, posting $3,400, followed by the Soldiers Square ramp, $2,359, and West ramp $2,056.

Revenue from parking permits hit the $2,000 mark.

Although 1968 ended on a highly profitable month, the commission's annual report is expected to show revenues were down at least $15,000 from original estimates.

In an attempt to generate more business for the Soldiers Square facility, the city council recently lowered the parking rates and at the same time received assurance from the Appleton Downtown Appleton Retail Association it would launch a public relations campaign to better familiarize motorists with the 452-car structure.

MRA Wants 4 Blocks Added to Development

MENASHA — A request from the Menasha Redevelopment Authority and its developers to enlarge the downtown redevelopment core by four more blocks is on the agenda of tonight's committee of the whole meeting.

The four blocks, consisting chiefly of residential property but including two churches, several businesses, a club and a dairy plant, lie between Chute and Third Streets, bounded by Tayco Street on the west and Milwaukee Street on the east.

Officials have explained the request as a measure to make the area officially in MRA jurisdiction coincide with the area where redevelopment plans have been made by Public Facilities Associates, Inc., developers for the MRA.

Core Boundaries

The present core area turned over to the MRA by council action in January last year is bounded by Racine Street on the east, Water Street on the south, Tayco Street from Water to Chute Street, Chute from Tayco to Milwaukee Street, Milwaukee Street from Chute to Third Street, and Third from Milwaukee to Racine.

The new boundaries would be Racine, Water, Tayco and Third streets.

Public Facilities has drawn extensive redevelopment plans for an area including the officially-designated core and two additional blocks, bounded by Milwaukee, Chute, Tayco and First streets. A public hearing is being planned to present the plans to citizens and landowners in the area. Following the hearing formal adoption of the plan by the council and MRA would be sought in order for Public Facilities to start putting the plans into action.

Final Inspection Saturday at New McKinley School

Appleton board of education members will accompany contractors and sub-contractors Saturday morning on a final inspection tour of new McKinley Elementary School.

The inspection, running from 9 a.m. to noon, will precede final approval of the construction. Five per cent of the contract is withheld pending the final tour.

Administrators are expected to join the room by room check.

McKinley was occupied late this fall after strikes delayed the anticipated September opening of the $1 million school, which houses about 750 students. It has 33 rooms on two floors.

Board members will convene on Jan. 27 and take action on the contract.

K of C to Offer Transportation to CEF Rally Tonight

NEENAH — Kimberly-Clark Corporation has leased the Woolworth Building on E Wisconsin Avenue for offices for several units of its research and engineering division.

The transaction was completed Friday, according to a company spokesman, and the use of the first floor of the former variety store will help relieve space problems in K-C's old office facilities on the island.

The move of personnel and equipment into the newly-renovated quarters is not expected to be completed until after Feb. 1.

Nixon Reminded Of Commitment

WHITTIER, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's boyhood friends of the Quaker faith want to remind him of his commitment to peace.

Silently, 35 persons carrying placards walked in rain Sunday from Whittier High School to Whittier College, five blocks away, where they held a two-hour vigil seeking world peace. Nixon attended both schools.

"As a Quaker, you are aware that for 300 years the Religious Society of Friends has opposed war in any form," the group said in an open letter to Nixon.

Ann Rush, chairman of Quakers for Action, said later the demonstration was "a prayer and a hope for a real beginning of world peace during the term of a Quaker president."

and tax reform for cities on the state level.

Kaukauna will not be represented, Mayor Gilbert Anderson said today, pointing out his city, with only 11,000 population, has not been included in the past.

Interested in Programs

"But we are definitely interested in many of the programs the Alliance favors and certainly will be watchful of what transpires later this month," Anderson said. He was non-committal as to whether Kaukauna will join in the future.

Another aspect of the Madison meeting will be a conference of mayors and other officials from several Wisconsin cities with James Morgan, secretary, state department of taxation, and Douglas Weiford, secretary, state department of local affairs and development.

A complete review of Tarr Task Force suggestions to date on governmental operations and Weiford, according to Mayor Otto Fesige, Madison, Alliance president.

Fesige said the two state included it in a $104,294 package officials will explain how certain of projects proposed for a tax redistribution formulas were spring bond issue. However, it developed by the Tarr committee, restored the $18,000 Jan. 6 when it sought to meet the $500,000

Wilson School's Leaky Roof Will be Replaced

Wilson Junior High School will get a new roof next summer.

Supt. of Schools William Spears said this morning the school must act as quickly as possible to remedy the leakage which last week was described as "major" by Appleton's director of inspection.

Spears said the board of education has budgeted $18,000 for the repair, and construction can start as soon as school is out in early June. The cost is based on estimates by two contractors.

Wilson and Roosevelt junior highs are scheduled for additions to be ready for the fall of 1970. However, Spears said the roof problem, a separate item, is too serious to be delayed.

Major Leakage
In his report, Charles Magnette, Appleton's director of inspection, noted major leakage around the building at the wall lines and at various locations where tile sections are broken and around air shafts, towers and the like.

Magnette accompanied Spears and Kenneth Schmidt, the school's building maintenance supervisor, on a thorough check of the junior high Thursday, following the Wednesday night fiscal control board refusal to bond for the repair.

The board of education had included it in a $104,294 package officials will explain how certain of projects proposed for a tax redistribution formulas were spring bond issue. However, it developed by the Tarr committee, restored the $18,000 Jan. 6 when it sought to meet the $500,000 reduction ordered by the fiscal board

Like other structures facing this cold and snowy weather, Magnette said Wilson was affected by "a backup from icing conditions in the roof gutters." He also blamed "lifting of tiles from freezing conditions" for some of the damage.

Urge Heating Cables

His remedy would be heating cables to prevent gutter freeze-up or removal of the gutters and spouts as an alternative. He urged the cables be installed in all school buildings where required.

Construction is expected to start this fall on the single-story addition to the 44-year-old Wilson School, which is part of the five-year capital improvements program. Bonding is scheduled for 1969 for Wilson and Roosevelt additions.

Spears said the new roof is not part of the addition and would not affect the proposed fall construction.

Starvation May Take Toll Of Game Birds farm methods call for early hay cutting and since birds often nest in fields, nests are destroyed by mowers.

He recommended conservation-minded farmers leave hedgerows of wild growth between fields. Hedgerows, little larger than present fence lines, could provide nesting areas, travel lanes and escape routes for the pheasants and Hungarian partridge.

Les Neustadter, district game manager at Plymouth, said there are "more 'Huns' down here than I've seen in the past." He said the birds should winter well unless unusually cold weather occurs.

He added that ice-glazed fields have presented a feeding problem for the birds in Calumet County.

Disciplined, Creative Company Living Theatre's 'Frankenstein' Was Worth Delay of 75 Minutes

BY JAMES AUER

Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

That amazingly disciplined and creative company, the Living Theatre, returned to the stage of the Lawrence Memorial Chapel Saturday evening to present "Frankenstein," the second of its two scheduled Appleton performances.

And even though the curtain (imaginary) rose some 75 minutes late — for a complex of technical and sociological reasons — the production turned out to be well worth an hour or so spent waiting in a drafty lobby.

For the Living Theatre, under the direction of Julian Beck and his wife, Judith Malina, is surely one of the more exciting troupes working today (it prefers to be known as a "radical ensemble") and its performances are like no others.

Three-Level Grid

"Frankenstein", for instance, is staged in, on and about a three-level grid composed primarily of piping, with translucent backdrop, special-effects boxes, flashing lights, whistles, loudspeakers and other assorted paraphernalia.

Throughout the evening this set — which strikes one at first as an accumulation of leftover debris from a bankrupt plumber's shop — proves to have remarkable flexibility, serving at one moment as an operating room, at another, a sinking ship, and still another, a block of prison cells.

It is brilliantly adapted to an examination of the theme of "Frankenstein", which is nothing less than: "How can we end human suffering?"

In dealing with this question, Beck and his anonymous performers (there is no program, and the "script" is credited to no particular author) use a total-theater approach, involving audience as well as actors in an engrossing and, at times, overwhelming melange of rhythmic marching, animal cries, gymnastics, techniques abstracted from modern dance, Eastern meditation, recitations, a manual and collective contributions phlebotomy and tension-inducing repetition, which produces an effect akin to boredom.

It's all very ingenious and engrossing, and the audience at Saturday's performance was audibly impressed by the "creation" of Frankenstein's monster before its eyes; a particularly gruesome heart transplant operation; a silhouetted attempt to raise the dead, and a frighteningly detailed summary of all the ways death has been imposed on man throughout the ages.

Proper Combination

The first two "acts" struck this reviewer as superbly paced and staged, with just the proper combination of discipline and improvisation. The third act — perhaps because of the lateness of the hour and the fatigue of the cast — represented a definite falling off in vigor and creative ingenuity. Or it may simply be that the "problem" of examination of the theme of "Frankenstein", which is nothing less than: "How can we end human suffering?"

If so, it wouldn't be the first time that the villain has stolen the show from the "good guys". In any case, it would be pleasant to be able to credit individual members of the cast for their fine work; but their names were not available. Suffice it to say that their individual and collective contributions were admirable, and the technique, which has been developed should be an inspiration and challenge to other workers in the theater.

Appleton Teens Suspects in Theft of Van

Two 17-year-old Appleton youths are being held by Shorewood authorities in connection with the thefts of vehicles in Appleton and Fond du Lac.

According to a report received this morning by Appleton police, the youths are suspected of taking a 1962 carry-all vehicle from a parking lot in the 600 block of W. College Avenue late Sunday or early today. Gaynell Klockzien, route 5, Appleton, owner of the vehicle, reported the loss at 1:10 a.m.

The truck was found in Fond du Lac about 5 a.m. today. A car stolen from Fond du Lac was recovered in Shorewood early today. Shorewood notified Appleton authorities of the apprehension about 4:30 a.m. today. Both runaway boys live on the southside.

Runaway Girl Apprehended In New London

A 16-year-old north side Appleton girl spent the weekend in juvenile detention in the Outagamie County jail after being taken into custody in New London Saturday noon.

Appleton police said the girl had been missing from home since Friday afternoon. She also had run away the previous weekend, her mother reported.

New London police, acting at the request of Appleton authorities, took the girl into custody at the home of a New London man. The girl was released to the custody of her mother this morning, pending further action by juvenile authorities.

Investigation is continuing, and police said it is possible others involved in incidents surrounding the flight of the Appleton girl will be charged.

Broehm in Washington At Inauguration Rite

Appleton's officialdom was unofficially represented at the inaugural of President Nixon in Washington today.

City Clerk Elden Broehm arrived in the nation's capital over the weekend to attend the event.

Broehm was among countless city and county officials Washington. Broehm said he throughout the state receiving expects to be back by Thursday.

City Moves Toward More Central Buying

Four Departments Group Truck Needs For Joint Bidding

The City of Appleton is shifting toward major centralized purchasing with four municipal departments collectively advertising for bids on 11 trucks and other equipment.

"When we reviewed the 1969 budget requests there were several items that lent themselves to joint bidding," Finance Director David Champion said today.

"So, we prepared a list, submitted them to the street-sanitation committee, and its recommendation received approval from the city council last week," he added.

Several Trucks

Champion said several trucks are to be purchased for various divisions within the department of public works. In addition, the parking commission, department of inspection and park-recreation commission have agreed to lump proposed purchases.

The school board also was asked if it had any truck purchases scheduled for 1969 but replied there were none, according to Champion. He said the inquiry was made by Donald Bensch, assistant public works director.

Recently, the police department sought bids on new patrol cars, alternating them to include purchase or lease. In the past, the department has purchased the vehicles but it is now considering leasing.

Council Request

"I think we are starting to meet some of the criteria suggested by the city council when it asked that we get into more centralized purchasing," Champion said.

Last year he conducted an experiment on office supply bids, resulting in considerable savings.

So, he decided to take a few days vacation and drove to city and county officials Washington. Broehm said he throughout the state receiving expects to be back by Thursday.

Charges Expected Against 1 of 3 Teens Found in Bar

Charges are expected to be brought this afternoon against one of three Appleton youths who were jailed following an investigation by city police Sunday night.

Detectives said that although investigation is incomplete, the 19-year-old youth probably will be initially charged with contributing to the delinquency of two minor boys for whom he allegedly purchased beer at an Appleton tavern Sunday night. The youth is being held in the city jail awaiting a court appearance today.

Police said that he and a 16-year-old east side youth were in possession of large, switchblade knives when they were taken to who were jailed following an investigation by city police Sunday night.

Police confiscated the illegal weapons.

Juvenile Detention

The 16-year-old youth, who is under supervision of welfare authorities, also had a selective service card issued to another person, police said. The youth was placed in juvenile detention.

A 14-year-old north side youth, taken into custody with his two companions at the downtown tavern, also is in juvenile detention in the county jail. Police said he became ill at the police station, after telling authorities he would not answer questions until he consulted an attorney.

Authorities were called Sunday night when the 14-year-old boy reportedly attempted to cash a check at the tavern.

Detectives said they are continuing investigation into the possibility that the youths are involved in other check writing offenses.

Stolen Car Abandoned In City Intersection

A car reported stolen early today was found abandoned at Rankin and Lindbergh Streets, Appleton police said.

Mike Nielsen, 1315 E. Frances St., reported at 6:15 a.m. that his 1968 auto was taken from in front of his house.

Police had seen the car in the middle of the Rankin-Lindbergh Streets intersection about 11 p.m. Sunday, but did not know at the time the car had been stolen. Police said they thought the auto had stalled. The hood was up.

Police, after learning the vehicle was stolen, found that the keys were gone and the battery was dead.

Soviets Repeat Plea For Talks With U.S.

Parents Die in Crash 6 Children Grow Up

WEST BEND (AP) — Six "self-reliant" and "very mature" children were told Sunday they must face life without their parents, a task for which a relative said love had prepared them.

The youngsters' parents Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Schroeder Jr., were aboard a United Air Lines Boeing 727 which crashed Saturday night in the Pacific Ocean near Los Angeles without a trace of survivors.

"There were a few tears shed, but over-all they took it very well," said William J. Albrecht, an uncle who was among relatives arriving at the Schroeder home after receiving news of the crash.

"They realize how wonderful their parents were, and how much love was shown," Albrecht said. "I told them that it is going to help them later on in life to make their own decisions."

"They are very mature for their age, and accept their responsibility. They were raised this way," he said.

Schroeder, 37, employed recently as an executive with a Milwaukee sales promotion firm, had gone to California Jan. 11 to attend a convention in Palm Springs, Calif., for his company.

He and his wife, Mary, 38, had dined with friends Saturday night before boarding the plane for Milwaukee.

Their children are Robert, 16, William, 15, Bart, 13, Linda, 12, Patrick, 7, and Michael, 2.

"We are going to do our best to keep these children together right here," Albrecht said.

The Schroeders moved to West Bend from Sheboygan about 14 years ago.

Coincides With Nixon Inauguration

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today reaffirmed its willingness to begin a "serious exchange of opinions" with the United States on the reduction of nuclear missile systems for both attack and defense.

The timing of the statement, coincident with the inauguration of President Nixon, emphasized the new Soviet effort to get missile talks started with the United States.

The Soviet government is ready to discuss the "mutual restriction and subsequent reduction of strategic means of delivery of nuclear weapons, including defensive systems," the statement said.

The Soviet government believes it is possible, "though not an easy thing," to settle "concrete questions of curbing the arms race," said a statement read to a news conference by Leonid I. Zamyatin, head of the Foreign Ministry press department.

Jan Palach's Death Electrifies Czechs

PRAGUE (AP) — Spurred by the death of Jan Palach, Czech students talked today of strikes and mass meetings to pressure their leaders into standing up to the Soviet occupiers.

Palach died Sunday, three days after he set himself afire in a protest that electrified the nation. Many Czechs said his act of sacrifice affected the country more than anything since the Soviet invasion five months ago.

"We have new courage, a new symbol," said one young man who had placed a candle in Wenceslas Square where the 21-year-old student drenched himself with gasoline and set himself aflame.

The country's Communist leaders tried to prevent a new crisis that could bring a new Soviet crackdown. They faced the threat of another student becoming a human torch to protest the loss of freedoms since the invasion and of the growing gap between the leadership and the public.

Speakers at rallies and on radio and television asked that there be no more human sacrifices. Another student who talked with Palach three hours before he died said in a broadcast that Palach told him: "My act has fulfilled the purpose but let nobody else do it. Let the living make their efforts in the struggle. I say goodbye. We may still see each other."

Karel Kovanda, a representative of the student union in Bohemia and Moravia, told a rally the students will act, but "we have to choose acts which will be adequate to Jan Palach."

Students passed the word for a mass meeting in Prague's Old Town Square and chalked "strike" on streetcars and on shop windows in Wenceslas Square.

erett M. Dirksen—the man with the flowing curls and organ tones—was the master of ceremonies. He also administered the oath to Agnew shortly before Nixon was sworn in.

Earlier Johnson met the Nixons at the White House with a warm handshake for the incoming President and a kiss for the new First Lady.

The historic tableau was played out on a stand before the Capitol, its participants shielded on three sides by broad panes of bulletproof glass and guarded above by armed federal agents scanning the crowds with special wide-angle devices.

As the totems of power passed from Lyndon Johnson to Richard Nixon, from Democrat to Republican, from "Great Society" to "Forward Together" helicopters carrying Secret Service men hovered in the leaden skies nearby.

Capital streets, lined with more than 10,000 soldiers and stands where victorious Republicans jostled with antiwar protesters, were damp from three days of rain.

In outlying areas of the capital armed National Guardsmen patrolled with city police. Mingling in the downtown crowds were plainclothes experts from Chicago, New York and Philadelphia known for skills at spotting pickpockets, con men and psychopaths.

From a hospital bed a scant three miles from the inaugural scene, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower sent a message urging his countrymen to unite behind the man who served him as vice president for eight years.

"The nature of the next four years is in the hands of all the people," said Eisenhower, who is making a slow recovery at Walter Reed Army Hospital from his seventh heart attack.

"No longer are we partisans in a presidential campaign," said Eisenhower. "Now we are Americans together."

The 77-year-old general, stricken by his last attack just hours after urging the Republican National Convention to nominate Nixon, ended his message with Nixon's inaugural theme: "Forward together."

The two inaugural Bibles, held one atop the other by Mrs. Nixon, are family heirlooms dating to 1828 and 1873.

Perhaps in recognition of the darkest issue dividing the nation, the Vietnam war, Nixon decided to have the two brown leather Bibles open at the second chapter, fourth verse of Isaiah, which says:

"And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Thousands of antiwar demonstrators, who planned to picket the inaugural parade, put on a noisy preview Sunday.

The youthful protesters marched up Pennsylvania Avenue toward the Capitol shouting for a Viet Cong victory and calling Nixon a war criminal.

The march—whose ranks were made bizarre by many participants wearing ghoulish white theatrical masks with Nixon's likeness—was staged as the main act of the first mass inauguration protest in American history.

Police estimated the protest turnout at 5,000. A protest leader, David Dellinger who also was one of the leaders at last year's demonstrations at the Chicago Democratic National Convention and at the Pentagon, said the marchers numbered 10,000 to 12,000.

The throng stretched six blocks, passing the citadels of government along Pennsylvania Avenue, snarling traffic and startling Republicans and tourists pouring in to see the festivities.

Tourists taking in the sights gaped at 150 or so protesters who, joining hands, did a swinging maypole dance around the Washington monument chanting "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh; NLF is gonna win."

Nixon arrived in the Capital from New York about two hours after the demonstration got underway. But the Secret Service carefully routed his motorcade around the "counter-inaugural" parade.

Nixon got a standing ovation, punctuated with whistles and cheers, Sunday night as he made his first public inaugural appearance—at a Constitutional Hall concert.

Nixon, in a tuxedo, and his wife Pat wearing a flowing white crepe gown, waved at the sellout crowd from their places in the presidential box.

Also in the box were Nixon's two daughters, Tricia, 22, and Julie, 20, along with Julie's husband, David Eisenhower, David's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Eisenhower and Nixon's 85-year-old aunt, Mrs. Jane Beeson of Whittier, Calif.

A huge American flag hung from the ceilings and the Nixons joined in singing the National Anthem as the concert began.

with the people we can do everything."

Employing greater eloquence than usual, Nixon said with the energies of the people enlisted, "we can build a great cathedral of the spirit—each of us raising it one stone at a time, as he reaches out to his neighbor, helping, caring, doing."

Summing up, he said: "We have endured a long night of the American spirit. But as our eyes catch the dimness of the first rays of dawn, let us not curse the remaining dark. Let us gather the light.

"Our destiny offers not the cup of despair but the chalice of opportunity. So let us seize it, not in fear but in gladness—and, 'riders on the earth together,' let us go forward, firm in our faith, steadfast in our purpose, cautious of the dangers; but sustained by our confidence in the will of God and the promise of man."

target for their demonstrations and the new president was made sharply aware of what life in the bull's-eye is going to be like.

Nixon masks and effigies were featured in a counter-inaugural parade staged by 5,000 demonstrators Sunday. Signs calling the new President criminal and the tool of billionaires bobbed in the straggling throng as it moved along Pennsylvania Avenue in the opposite direction of Nixon's route to the White House.

The youthful marchers also blighted a reception for the new vice president, Spiro T. Agnew, at the Smithsonian Institution. They jeered arriving guests and threw stones and firecrackers at a few of them before mounted police drove the demonstrators from the entrance.

Two policemen were injured by hurled objects but no guests were hurt and no injuries were reported among the demonstrators, who gave ground readily in the face of the police action.

Park police reported arresting five youths in the Smithsonian incident and the metropolitan police arrested 10 others during the parade. But for the most part, march leaders succeeded in their announced aim of keeping the demonstration peaceful and orderly.

An attempt by some demonstrators to haul down an American flag in front of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration building at the foot of Capitol Hill was thwarted by a small band of marchers who ringed the base of the flagpole and kept the others back.

What organization the demonstration had was furnished by David Dellinger, chairman of the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, and a veteran of the peace march on the Pentagon in 1967 and last summer's disorders at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

But the marchers were a widely disparate group of young people, mostly from eastern and midwestern states, who seemed united mainly in their youth and their opposition to the Vietnam war. Their signs proclaimed them champions of a dozen causes including women's rights, Biafran freedom, Greek democracy and the "liberation" of the South. "Damn Everything But the Girls," declared another.

The parade, authorized by the police, who shepherded it along on motorbikes, went largely unnoticed by Washingtonians. Few of the business establishments along the route were open and the big government buildings lining one side of the street were empty.

The biggest disruption was to traffic, already a problem as thousands of visitors for the inauguration clogged the streets.

Lovell's Visit at State's Booth Attracts Large Crowd

WASHINGTON (AP)—A visit by Apollo 8 navigator James Lovell made the Wisconsin booth a center of pre-inaugural interest Sunday during festivities in the Sheraton-Park Hotel's crowded ballroom.

Republicans who were gathering for the inauguration of President Nixon flocked to the booth, and Gov. Warren P. Knowles found himself host to crowds larger than those attracted to booths containing California Gov. Ronald Reagan or New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

Lovell stayed at Knowles' booth about two hours. Then Rep. Melvin R. Laird of Wisconsin, whom Nixon has picked for secretary of defense, took Lovell's seat next to Knowles as spectators continued to arrive.

"We're all in orbit in this booth," said Mrs. Mary Ising, GOP national committeewoman from Oshkosh, Wis.

Others in the booth included Ody J. Fish, Wisconsin Republican chairman; GOP national committeeman John Hough of Janesville, Wis., and Paul Hasset, Knowles' executive secretary.

Cocktail Parties
The Wisconsin governor attended several cocktail parties during the weekend, including a Saturday night affair honoring Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill.

Knowles and Lovell were among guests Sunday night of Anna Chennault, widow of the World War II Flying Tigers general.

Mrs. Chennault, who attended the governor's inaugural in Madison, Wis., a week ago, held a dinner party in her $160,000-a-year penthouse overlooking the Potomac.

Knowles is to escort Mrs. Chennault tonight to one of the half dozen inaugural balls.

She has purchased $4,000 worth of Hilton box seats, and another box at the Shoreham Hotel where most of Wisconsin's delegation of about 200 persons is to be.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Phil Esposito and the Boston Bruins are in mid-winter orbit John Muckler and the Minnesota North Stars are in eclipse.

Esposito, the National Hockey League's top scorer, set up one goal and tallied his 29th of the season Sunday as the sizzling Bruins extended their unbeaten streak to 11 games with a 5-3 victory over Toronto.

Muckler lost the Minnesota coaching job he had held for 2½ dark months after the North Stars bowed to St. Louis 3-1.

In Sunday night action, Philadelphia upended Detroit 1-1 and Oakland whipped Pittsburgh 6-3.

The bruising Bruins shrugged off Toronto's challenge on their period goals by Fred Stanfield and Ed Westfall to take a four-point East Division lead over Montreal's Stanley Cup champs into the All-Star break.

Set Up Goal

Esposito, driving to become the first 100-point scorer in NHL history, set up Bobby Orr's 13th goal and then shot Boston ahead 2-1 in the opening period. Ron Murphy also scored for the Bruins while Paul Henderson hit for two Maple Leaf goals.

Esposito had tallied 67 points in 43 games for a four-point edge over Detroit's Gordie Howe.

Muckler, who took over the Minnesota coaching reins from General Manager Wren Blair last Nov. 6, was replaced by Blair following the North Stars' eighth consecutive setback. The Stars, picked by pre-season pollsters to battle St. Louis for the West Division pennant, won only six of 35 games under Muckler.

Two goals by Al McDonald carried the torrid Blues, runaway leaders in the West, past Minnesota 11 as St. Louis' 17th successive game against West Division opposition without a loss.

Howe scored his 21st goal for the Red Wings against Philadelphia, but Guy Gendron's two goals and defenseman Dick Cherry's first NHL marker swept the Flyers to victory.

Rosemary Casals Tops Billie Jean King in Australian Net Meet

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Rosemary Casals of San Francisco defeated Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., Saturday in the semifinal round of women's singles of the New South Wales Tennis Tournament and meets Margaret Smith Court for the title today.

Miss Casals, seeded sixth, eliminated Mrs. King, top ranked in the tourney, 6-3, 5-7, 7-5, in a match dulled by the intense heat. It was 103 degrees in the shade at the time and officials guessed the temperature on the center court approached 120.

Later, the two American professionals combined and were defeated in the women's doubles final by Mrs. Court and Judy Tegart 15-13, 4-6, 6-3.

Glover Wins PBA Finals, Pitzer Fourth

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — John Glover, 22-year-old left-hander from Bakersfield, Calif., defeated Don McKune of Munster, Ind., 230-219 to capture the $6,000 first prize Saturday in the $45,000 Valley of the Sun Pro Bowling Tournament.

It was the third PBA championship for the youngster. The others came last year in the Ebonite Open at St. Louis and in the Juliette, Ill. test.

Ralph Egan of Muncie, N.Y., was third, with Dick Ritger of Hartford, Wis., placing fourth. Jimmy Mack of Dover, N.J., took fifth.

The nationally televised finals started with Ritger defeating Mack in a close 253-246 match. Ritger then lost to Egan in another cliffhanger at 232-227. McKune eliminated Egan 207-172 to set up the championship match.

Atkinson, of Raiders, Put Under Arrest

Charged With Being Fugitive From Georgia

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — George Atkinson of the Oakland Raiders was arrested by Jacksonville police after the American Football League All-Star Game Sunday on a charge of being a fugitive from Georgia.

A warrant had been issued for his arrest.

Peace Justice Dorkas Drake held a hearing on her front porch and ordered $2,000 bond. Atkinson posted the bond. He also was ordered to report to the peace justice every 30 days until an extradition warrant is received.

Atkinson was flanked at the hearing by two attorneys, who advised him not to discuss the case.

Atkinson was charged in a warrant issued by the Savannah Ga. municipal court with abandoning two children. Atkinson said he knew his arrest was pending but denied the children are his.

Atkinson, a rookie defensive back who collected $1,500 as his share of Sunday's football game, said he would return to his home in Savannah.

Ranger Coach To be Released From Hospital

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernie Geoffrion, coach of the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, will be released from the hospital in Oakland late today and will be flown home to recuperate following his collapse after his 3-1 victory over the Seals Friday night.

During Geoffrion's absence, Emile Francis, the club's general manager who also coached the club last year, will direct the team.

After a thorough examination by doctors in Oakland early Saturday, it was reported that Geoffrion had collapsed because of lack of sugar in his blood stream. He recently recovered from the flu and last May had half his stomach removed because of ulcers.

"When I was in high school I thought a hundred dollars a week was big money"

Maybe it isn't - but But not now. Now you want more - a new car, a great vacation, maybe someday even a home of your own.

So you realize you're not going to get there sticking with the job you have. So you decide to get something new, something better.

Good pay? Sure you want that. But you want other things, too: A little respect so you don't have to mumble when someone asks what you do for a living. And something with a future. The chance to earn more. To get someone to respect. To be someone.

Now if you could only get that break, the fresh start...

Sound a little bit like you talking? Good. Because we can give you that break, that fresh start.

We can give you the opportunity to become a computer programmer - a booming career, with over 25,000 job vacancies just waiting for people with the right training.

What you need is the desire and the attitude. You supply the desire and we'll supply a test that tells us quickly and accurately if you have the attitude. Who are we? ECPI Electronic Computer Programming Institute, a major education institution with over 80 training centers in the U.S. and Canada.

We are completely equipped with IBM machines, textbooks, and a staff of teachers who are professionals. We also have a free placement service that can help you find one of those 25,000 jobs after you graduate.

That's what we have. But do you have what it takes to be a computer programmer? If you're between 18 and 40 and a high school graduate the answer is probably yes. But make sure. Clip the coupon and send for your free sample. It's your first step toward making that fresh start.

Nixon Becomes 37th U.S. President, Pledges to Work for Peace in World

Security High for Ceremony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Up to 20,000 soldiers and police including out-of-town experts known for their ability to spot pickpockets, con men and psychopaths formed the tightest security today ever devised for the inauguration of an American president.

Focal point of the security was the stand in front of the Capitol set up for Richard Nixon's oath taking, the inaugural parade route from there to the White House and the presidential viewing stand on the sidewalk before the executive mansion.

Bulletproof glass protected the front of both the inaugural and viewing stands with flanking panes extending back diagonally to deflect shots from any angle.

Along the parade route manhole covers were locked shut, roots were cleared of all but uniformed personnel and every last building on both sides of broad Pennsylvania Avenue was barred to all but those with special passes, including permanent occupants.

New Leader Takes Oath

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon, shielded by the tightest security ever devised for an inauguration, today became the 37th president of a nation he said faces "a crisis of the spirit."

In a pageant almost as old as the republic, the California grocer's son repeated the tradition-hallowed presidential oath and accepted the power and the agony of the office that eluded him eight years ago.

And afterward, in his inaugural address, Nixon said the nation is "rich in goods but ragged in spirit; reaching with magnificent precision for the moon, but falling into raucous discord here on Earth."

Such simple virtues as "goodness, decency, love, kindness," are the answer to the crisis of spirit, Nixon said.

"We cannot learn from one another until we stop shouting at one another," he said.

Nixon assumed the office by reciting only 35 words.

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States," the 56-year-old Nixon intoned, his hand resting on two family Bibles held by his wife, Pat.

"And will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States," he repeated after Chief Justice Earl Warren, a one-time political foe administering the oath for the fourth and probably last time.

Before Nixon took the oath his vice president, Spiro T. Agnew, was sworn in by Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen.

The historic tableau was played out on a stand before the Capitol, its participants shielded on three sides by broad panes of bulletproof glass and guarded above by armed federal agents scanning the crowds with special wide-angle devices.

As the totems of power passed from Lyndon Johnson to Richard Nixon, from Democrat to Republican, from "Great Society" to "Forward Together" helicopters carrying Secret Service men hovered in the leaden skies nearby.

Capital streets, lined with more than 10,000 soldiers and stands where victorious Republicans jostled with antiwar protesters, were damp from three days of rain.

In outlying areas of the capital armed National Guardsmen patrolled with city police. Mingling in the downtown crowds were plainclothes experts from Chicago, New York and Philadelphia known for skills at spotting pickpockets, common and ardent Nixon, shielded by psychopaths.

From a hospital bed a scant three miles from the inaugural scene, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower sent a message urging his countrymen to unite behind the man who served him for eight years.

"The nature of the next four years is in the hands of all the people," said Eisenhower, who is making a slow recovery at Walter Reed Army Hospital from his seventh heart attack.

"No longer are we partisans in a presidential campaign," said Eisenhower. "Now we are Americans together."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Antiwar demonstrators, holding their own inauguration, have elevated Richard M. Nixon to the position of No. 1 target for their protests.

Even before taking the oath as the 37th President today, Nixon was made sharply aware of what life in the bull's-eye is going to be like.

Nixon masks and effigies were featured in a counter-inaugural parade staged by 5,000 demonstrators Sunday. Signs calling the new President criminal and the tool of billionaires bobbed in the straggling throng as it moved along Pennsylvania Avenue in the opposite direction of Nixon's route to the White House.

The youthful marchers also blighted a reception for the new vice president, Spiro T. Agnew, at the Smithsonian Institution. They jeered arriving guests and threw stones and firecrackers at a few of them before mounted police drove the demonstrators from the entrance.

Two policemen were injured by hurled objects but no guests were hurt and no injuries were reported among the demonstrators, who gave ground readily in the face of the police action.

Hickel Wins OK as Member of Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Interior Committee approved today, by a 14-3 vote, the controversial nomination of Gov. Walter J. Hickel of Alaska as secretary of the interior in the Nixon administration.

The endorsement, hard won by Hickel in five days of committee scrutiny, came less than two hours before the presidential inauguration of Richard M. Nixon.

The other 11 new Cabinet members had won declared or tacit approval of various Senate committees without major difficulty last week.

Most appointments were due to go to the floor for confirmation today.

Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., of the Interior Committee said Hickel's nomination would not be acted upon by the Senate until Tuesday at the earliest.

Jackson said the committee still had to complete the record on Hickel's financial interests, which were a key point during extended committee deliberations.

The governor has promised to divest himself of all holdings that could raise a conflict of interest, Jackson said.

The Hickel nomination was opposed in the committee by Sens. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, George S. McGovern of South Dakota and Frank E. Moss of Utah, all Democrats.

The Senate Interior committee had been expected to act over the weekend, but announced after a closed session Saturday that it had asked Hickel for a statement pledging he did not hold any oil or gas leases in his home state.

'...The Times Are on the Side of Peace'

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon launched his administration today with a pledge to consecrate his office "my energies and all the wisdom I can summon, to the cause of peace among nations."

For the first time, he said, "because the people of the world want peace and the leaders are afraid of war, the times are on the side of peace."

The problems at home, he said in his inaugural address, are caused by a crisis of the spirit: "We can build a great cathedral of the spirit—each of us raising it one stone at a time, as he reaches out to his neighbor, helping, caring, doing."

He said his administration will press forward with goals of full employment, better housing, excellence in education and rebuilding the cities, but added, "We are approaching the limits of what government alone can do."

The greatest need, he said, "is to reach beyond government, to enlist the legions of the concerned and the committed."

"We have found ourselves

rich in goods but ragged in spirit; reaching with magnificent precision for the moon, but falling into raucous discord here on earth," he said.

The Chief Executive said the answer to the crisis will be found in such simple virtues as "goodness, decency, love, kindness."

"In these difficult years, America has suffered from a fever of words," Nixon contended, "from inflated rhetoric that promises more than it could possibly deliver; from angry rhetoric that fans discontents into hatreds, from bombastic rhetoric that postures instead of persuading."

"We cannot learn from one another until we stop shouting at one another—until we speak quietly enough so that our words can be heard as well as our voices," he added.

At the same time, Nixon seemed to hint that portions of President Johnson's Great Society programs will be continued.

He promised to "press urgently forward" toward such goals as rebuilding cities, providing better housing, strengthening education, protecting the environment and seeking full employment.

Citing his inaugural motto, Nixon said all must go forward together if any is to advance.

"No man can be fully free while his neighbor is not," he said.

"This means black and white together as one nation, not two," the President declared. "The laws have caught up with our conscience. What remains is to give light to what is in the law; to ensure at last that all are born equal in dignity before God, all are born equal in dignity before man."

Nixon's principal emphasis

clearly was on the search for peace.

"For the first time, because the people of the world want peace and the leaders are afraid of war, the times are on the side of peace," he said.

To help make the world safe for mankind, he added, "is our summons to greatness."

As in the past, Nixon asserted that "after a period of confrontation, we are entering an era of negotiation. Let all nations know that during this administration our lines of communication will be open. We seek an open world—open to ideas, open to the exchange of goods and people, a world in which no people, great or small, will live in angry isolation."

These words seemed to suggest Nixon will at least consider resuming ties with mainland China and, perhaps, with Communist Cuba.

"We cannot expect to make everyone our friends," he said, "but we can try to make no one our enemy."

The new President invited would-be adversaries to join in a peaceful competition: "Let us cooperate to reduce the burden of arms, to strengthen the structure of peace, to lift up the poor and the hungry."

Adding a note of caution, he said: "But to all who would be tempted by weakness, let us leave no doubt that we will be as strong as we need to be for as long as we need to be."

Nixon declared, "I know that peace does not come through wishing for it—that there is no substitute for days and even years of patient and prolonged diplomacy."

But, he emphasized, "I add

Agnew Also Takes an Oath, Vows to Help Nation's Cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spiro father's name was Anagnostopoulos, rose to the nation's second-highest elected office from Baltimore County executive, the Depression, took the oath of office today to become the nation's 33rd vice president.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen administered the oath in the sonorous tones for which he is noted, minutes before Richard M. Nixon was sworn in as President.

Agnew's hand rested on his eldest daughter Pamela's white-covered, King James version Bible. It was opened at the 100th Psalm—the vice president's favorite—which reads in part: "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord."

The 50-year-old Agnew, whose important announcement about that later.

Agnew said he would primarily devote his energies to problems of the cities, but he said he hoped to move gradually into foreign policy matters.

Agnew said the inaugural ceremonies are more than a celebration of the accomplishments of any one man. "It is a rededication to our highest ideals of government. Only in the United States is the transfer of power done with such lucidity and with so little rancor."

The son of a Greek restaurateur, Agnew grew up during the Depression in which he watched his father's business fail. At one time, he said, he sold vegetables on the streets of Baltimore.

He went to church in the morning. The Marine Corps has taught us, feeding the hungry, healing the sick, caring for the needy, trusting our young, training them up in the way that they should go."

During the church service, the

Johnson Works Hard Last Day in Office

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Richard M. Nixon stood in the spotlight today as the nation's 37th President, Lyndon Baines Johnson quietly left the national capital, a private citizen for the first time in 32 years.

The plans called for Johnson, after escorting Nixon to the Capitol for the oath-taking ceremonies, to have a quiet lunch with outgoing Defense Secretary Clark Clifford and then fly on an Air Force plane to his ranch in Texas.

Johnson worked at presidential business this morning before Nixon arrived at the White House for coffee.

Johnson arose at his usual time, about 7 a.m. He worked in the mansion, signing some executive orders. Aides said Johnson had completed his moving out of the presidential office in the west wing.

While Johnson has said he has looked forward to exchanging the 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. address of the White House for Ranch Road No. 1, Johnson said, "I am leaving this town with nothing but gratitude and love in my heart."

Lodge Heads for Paris to Take Charge

PARIS (AP) — The Nixon administration's first team for the Vietnam peace talks began arriving in Paris today, and the four delegations were expected to get down to business before the end of the week.

Lawrence Walsh, who will replace Cyrus R. Vance as the U.S. delegation's No. 2 man, arrived this morning. Henry Cabot Lodge, the delegation chief, was due tonight from Washington.

Walsh said on his arrival there are elements of optimism in the coming negotiations to end the war. But "the timing of it may be difficult," he added.

"It would be wrong to minimize the difficulties ahead," Walsh told newsmen at Orly Airport. "Everyone realizes we have made a good start, but everyone also realizes that there is a great deal more to be accomplished. It seems to me the elements are here for optimism, but the timing of it may be difficult."

The Viet Cong's National Liberation Front proposed Saturday that the first session of substantive talks be held Tuesday. But Lodge said the U.S. response would have to await his arrival in Paris, and other officials in Washington doubted the talks could get under way so soon.

Washington Conference

President Johnson's chief negotiator at the talks, W. Averill Harriman, flew to Washington Sunday and saw both Lodge and Johnson soon after his arrival.

Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, supervisor of the South Vietnamese delegation, was expected back in Paris early this week. He had returned to Saigon before Christmas while the talks were deadlocked over the shape of a conference table.

A sense of urgency and activity pervaded all the delegations.

Vietnamese troops a month to possibly 20,000. Others put it at 10,000 a month.

A well-informed source in Saigon said "the 10,000 figure isn't bad at all, but it's nothing like 20,000 according to our preliminary estimates. We can't place any significance in it. They need about 10,000 troops a month to replace their losses."

He emphasized that these figures were only preliminary estimates and it would take about six months to get anything resembling an accurate figure.

settling other procedural matters. A few hours later they unexpectedly announced a decision to cut short further haggling on minor items.

The sudden burst of speed stirred speculation that pressure had been brought to bear by Moscow on North Vietnam and Washington on its South Vietnamese ally.

All is set for the most important phase of the talks, in which the four parties begin discussing such matters as guaranteeing the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam, a cease-fire, other military questions and eventually a political settlement.

There is expected to be a long wrangle about the agenda and what should be discussed first. But more optimism surrounds the talks than at any time since Hanoi and Washington representatives first met last May.

A large Viet Cong flag was planted on a 250-foot spire of Notre Dame Cathedral before dawn Sunday and waved in plain view of churchgoers and sightseers for most of the day.

Attacks Stepped Up

Enemy Keeps Fighting as It Talks

SAIGON (AP) — Four U.S. bases and a dozen South Vietnamese installations were hit Sunday night by stepped-up attacks which Saigon officials considered a demonstration of enemy determination to fight as well as talk in Paris.

Military spokesmen said eight Americans were killed, 35 were wounded and nine helicopters were slightly damaged by mortar and rocket attacks on 12 government camps and subsector headquarters in the northern, north and south of Saigon.

South Vietnamese headquarters said mortar and rocket attacks on 12 government camps and subsector headquarters in the northern, north and south of Saigon.

More than a million South Vietnamese troops across the country were placed on full alert Sunday because of the increased enemy activity, but a U.S. spokesman said there was no change in the status of American troops.

"We're maintaining the same degree of operational readiness we normally do," he said. "We show no enemy threat to Saigon at this point."

U.S. air cavalrymen sweeping near the Cambodian border and two of the American installations that were attacked seized more than four tons of ammunition, including 132,000 small arms and machine-gun bullets and 300 mortar rounds.

Massive Offensive

U.S. intelligence officers said a few captured documents indicated the enemy planned a massive winter-spring offensive to coincide with the presidential inauguration in Washington. But they discounted them because the documents gave conflicting starting dates going back to last Dec. 13.

U.S. military sources in Saigon also discounted intelligence estimates from Washington that infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into South Vietnam increased heavily in the last two months. The Saigon sources said such infiltration was "up slightly, but it isn't enough to change the current situation."

Some authorities in Washington said infiltration had increased from about 7,000 North

First of U.S. Troops Airlifted Into Germany

NUERNBERG, Germany (AP) — A huge airlift from the United States started pouring some 5,000 combat-ready GIs into Nuernberg today, on their way to maneuvers near the Czech border which both the Soviet and Czechoslovak Communists have protested.

The first of 63 giant C141 Star-lifter jet transports arrived at the Nuernberg airport at exactly 9 a.m. It brought 52 men of a surgical hospital unit from Ft. Knox, Ky.

The airlift is called Reforger One. With a plane landing every half hour and most of them carrying 90 men or more, the last of the 5,000 soldiers is due in Nuernberg by Tuesday night.

Most of the soldiers are members of the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division, a so-called dual based unit because it is stationed at Ft. Riley, Kan., but has combat equipment stockpiled in West Germany.

The troops arriving today and Tuesday are joining another 12,000 American soldiers who have been flying to West Germany since Jan. 6. Also already on the scene are four tactical fighter squadrons from the United States, totaling 3,500 men.

The Army says speed is not the point of the airlift. It says the main purpose is to test the efficiency of the dual-based plan of operations.

Politics is also a major factor. The exercise, now scheduled for Jan. 29-Feb. 4, was moved up six months because of the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia last August.

The Soviet Union and its allies have protested the maneuvers as an "aggressive" act. Communist Party papers in Czechoslovakia complained that such operations near Czechoslovakia's border showed that earlier U.S. expressions of concern for the occupied nation were hypocritical.

Soviets Repeat Plea For Talks With U.S.

Parents Die in Crash 6 Children Grow Up

WEST BEND (AP) — Six "self-reliant" and "very mature" children were told Sunday they must face life without their parents, a task for which a relative said love had prepared them.

The youngsters' parents Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Schroeder Jr., were aboard a United Air Lines Boeing 727 which crashed Saturday night in the Pacific Ocean near Los Angeles without a trace of survivors.

"There were a few tears shed, but over-all they took it very well," said William J. Albrecht, an uncle who was among relatives arriving at the Schroeder home after receiving news of the crash.

"They realize how wonderful their parents were, and how much love was shown," Albrecht said. "I told them that it is going to help them later on in life to make their own decisions."

"They are very mature for their age, and accept their responsibility. They were raised this way," he said.

Schroeder, 37, employed recently as an executive with a Milwaukee sales promotion firm, had gone to California Jan. 11 to attend a convention in Palm Springs, Calif., for his company.

He and his wife, Mary, 38, had dined with friends Saturday night before boarding the plane for Milwaukee.

Their children are Robert, 16; William, 15; Bart, 13; Linda, 12; Patrick, 7, and Michael, 2.

"We are going to do our best to keep these children together right here," Albrecht said.

The Schroeders moved to West Bend from Sheboygan about 14 years ago.

Coincides With Nixon Inauguration

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today reaffirmed its willingness to begin a "serious exchange of opinions" with the United States on the reduction of nuclear missile systems for both attack and defense.

The timing of the statement, coincident with the inauguration of President Nixon, emphasized the new Soviet effort to get missile talks started with the United States.

The Soviet government is ready to discuss the "mutual restriction and subsequent reduction of strategic means of delivery of nuclear weapons, including defensive systems," the statement said.

The Soviet government believes it is possible, "though not an easy thing," to settle "concrete questions of curbing the arms race," said a statement read to a news conference by Leonid I. Zamyatin, head of the Foreign Ministry press department.

Jan Palach's Death Electrifies Czechs

PRAGUE (AP) — Spurred by the death of Jan Palach, Czech students talked today of strikes and mass meetings to pressure their leaders into standing up to the Soviet occupiers.

Palach died Sunday, three days after he set himself afire in a protest that electrified the nation. Many Czechs said his act of sacrifice affected the country more than anything since the Soviet invasion five months ago.

"We have new courage, a new symbol," said one young man who had placed a candle in Wenceslas Square where the 21-year-old student drenched himself with gasoline and set himself aflame.

The country's Communist leaders tried to prevent a new crisis that could bring a new Soviet crackdown. They faced the threat of another student becoming a human torch to protest the loss of freedoms since the invasion and of the growing with the people we can do everything."

Employing greater eloquence than usual, Nixon said with the energies of the people enlisted, "we can build a great cathedral of the spirit—each of us raising it one stone at a time, as he reaches out to his neighbor, helping, caring, doing."

Summing up, he said: "We have endured a long night of the American spirit. But as our eyes catch the dimness of the first rays of dawn, let us not curse the remaining dark. Let us gather the light.

"Our destiny offers not the cup of despair but the chalice of opportunity. So let us seize it, not in fear but in gladness—and, riders on the earth together, let us go forward, firm in our faith, steadfast in our purpose, cautious of the dangers; but sustained by our confidence in the will of God and the promise of man."

Nixon Reminded Of Commitment

WHITTIER, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's boyhood friends of the Quaker faith want to remind him of his commitment to peace.

Silently, 35 persons carrying placards walked in rain Sunday from Whittier High School to Whittier College, five blocks away, where they held a two-hour vigil seeking world peace.

Nixon attended both schools.

"As a Quaker, you are aware that for 300 years the Religious Society of Friends has opposed war in any form," the group said in an open letter to Nixon.

Ann Rush, chairman of Quakers for Action, said later the demonstration was "a prayer and a hope for a real beginning of world peace during the term of a Quaker president."

LaFollette to Practice Law at Madison Firm

MADISON (AP) — Bronson C. LaFollette, defeated in November in his bid for governor of Wisconsin, said today he will practice law in Madison.

He said he was returning to the firm of LaFollette, Sinykin, Anderson, Davis and Abrahamson. He was with the firm before being elected attorney general in 1964.

The former Democratic official's uncle, former governor Phillip F. LaFollette, was associated with the law office until his death in 1965.

stricken by his last attack just hours after urging the Republican National Convention to nominate Nixon, ended his message with Nixon's inaugural theme:

"Forward together."

The two inaugural Bibles, held one atop the other by Mrs. Nixon, are family heirlooms dating to 1823 and 1873.

Perhaps in recognition of the darkest issue dividing the nation, the Vietnam war, Nixon decided to have the two brown leather Bibles open at the second chapter, fourth verse of Isaiah, which says:

"And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Thousands of antiwar demonstrators, who planned to picket the inaugural parade, put on a noisy preview Sunday.

The youthful protesters marched up Pennsylvania Avenue toward the Capitol shouting for a Viet Cong victory and calling Nixon a war criminal.

The march—whose ranks were made bizarre by many participants wearing ghastly white theatrical masks with Nixon's likeness—was staged as the main act of the first mass inauguration protest in American history.

Police estimated the protest turnout at 5,600. A protest leader, David Dellinger, who also was one of the leaders at last year's demonstrations at the Chicago Democratic National Convention and at the Pentagon, said the marchers numbered 10,000 to 12,000.

The throng stretched six blocks, passing the citadels of government along Pennsylvania Avenue, snarling traffic and startling Republicans and tourists pouring in to see the festivities.

Tourists taking in the sights gaped at 150 or so protesters who, joining hands, did a swinging maypole dance around the Washington monument chanting "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh; NLF is gonna win."

Nixon arrived in the Capital from New York about two hours after the demonstration got underway. But the Secret Service carefully routed his motorcade around the "counter-inaugural" parade.

Nixon got a standing ovation punctuated with whistles and cheers, Sunday night as he made his first public inaugural appearance—at a Constitutional Hall concert.

Nixon, in a tuxedo, and his wife Pat wearing a flowing white crepe gown, waved at the sellout crowd from their places in the presidential Box.

A huge American flag hung from the ceilings and the Nixons joined in singing the National Anthem as the concert began.

Lovell's Visit at State's Booth Attracts Large Crowd

WASHINGTON (AP)—A visit by Apollo 8 navigator James Lovell made the Wisconsin booth is to be a center of pre-inaugural interest Sunday during festivities in the Sheraton-Park Hotel's crowded ballroom.

Republicans who were gathering for the inauguration of President Nixon flocked to the booth, and Gov. Warren P. Knowles found himself host to crowds larger than those attracted to booths containing California Gov. Ronald Reagan or New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

Hickel Wins Committee OK

days of hearings last week during which the controversial Hickel apparently convinced the committee that his views on water pollution and conservation were in line with most of its members.

Remarks made by Hickel after his appointment was announced had been widely interpreted as indicating a pro-industry approach to both problems.

The governor, however, who has made millions in Alaska real estate, told the committee he had been misunderstood. He also pledged to leave in effect for at least two years an Interior Department freeze on leasing of federal lands in Alaska.

The department imposed the freeze to allow settlement of claims by natives threatened by a land rush since discovery of vast oil reserves.

Hickel got the most attention of the 12 Cabinet appointees, but Senate committees also took a close look at the financial holdings of David Kennedy, the Chicago banker named secretary of the Treasury, and David Packard, the multimillionaire nominee to be deputy secretary of defense.

Both were cleared after complicated formulas for disposing of their holdings or putting them in trust were worked out.

Knowles is to escort Mrs. Chennault tonight to one of the half dozen inaugural balls. She has purchased $4,000 worth of Hilton box seats, and another box at the Shoreham.

Inaugurations Often Have Been Something Less Than Dignified

Special to The Post-Crescent
WASHINGTON — The patter of little feet created a minor disturbance and a warm family interlude at President Ulysses S. Grant's first inauguration. As Grant delivered his address at the Capitol, his small daughter broke from her mother's grasp and dashed to her father. He held the girl's hand until he finished, and the crowd cheered them both.

Today in History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Today is Monday, Jan. 20, the 20th day of 1969. There are 345 days left in the year.
Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1937, as a result of the 20th, or "Lame Duck" Amendment to the Constitution, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was sworn into office for his second term—the first president to be inaugurated in January.

On this date: In 1887, the Senate approved the leasing of Pearl Harbor as a base for the Navy.

In 1892, students at the International YMCA Training School in Springfield, Mass., played the first official basketball game, invented by Dr. James Naismith.

In 1936, King George V of Britain died and his eldest son, the Prince of Wales, succeeded to the throne as Edward VIII.

In 1945, President Franklin D. Roosevelt broke tradition once again and was inducted into office for his fourth term.

In 1953, for the first time in 20 years, the nation inaugurated a Republican president, as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower took the oath of office as the country's 34th president.

In 1961, the youngest man ever elected to the presidency, John F. Kennedy, was inaugurated president of the United States and Lyndon B. Johnson vice president.

Ten years ago — First Deputy Prime Minister Anastas Mikoyan—regarded as the second most powerful man in the Soviet Union—left the United States after a two-week coast-to-coast visit.

Five years ago — President Johnson, in his first economic report, forecast records in personal incomes and corporate profits and told reporters he had started a campaign to cut the cost of electricity in the White House as part of a governmental program of economy.

One year ago — Turkey broke with her long Western partners and became the first NATO member to recognize the Greek military junta.

The founding fathers hoped that Presidential inaugurations would be solemn and dignified, but the unexpected often snarled the best laid plans, the National Geographic Society says.

Heat Agitated Guests

President James Madison's 1809 inaugural ball — the first held in the Nation's Capital — set a precedent in glitter and confusion. The crowd jammed into a Capitol Hill hotel in such numbers that windows were knocked out to improve ventilation.

In contrast, nobody thought of heating the temporary structure erected for Grant's second inaugural. Guests danced in overcoats and hacked at frozen refreshments.

Andrew Jackson's followers had too much anti-freeze. After Old Hickory's inauguration in 1829, he threw open the doors of the Executive Mansion to his supporters. Packed in tightly, guests pushed, shoved, and caroused on strong punch. Women

Davis Fills Laird's Spot on Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican Congressional Campaign Committee said Friday that Rep. Glenn R. Davis, R-Wis., has been named to its executive committee.

UWGB Seminar to Examine Foreign Issues Facing Nixon

Timely topics which President Nixon will face in the years ahead will be examined in a series of discussions on the University of Wisconsin Green Bay campus. The informal seminar, entitled "Foreign Affairs Facing Nixon," will be presented on Tuesday from 7:30 to 9 p.m. The topics include: the Middle East tinderbox, and the role of minority opinions in foreign policy.

The series, based on the UW extension division, will be moderated by Bill Vickery, of the Green Bay extension staff, or at the extension office on the campus. He also encouraged those interested in attending to make early phone reservations. The seminar opens with examinations of Czechoslovakia, Russia and Eastern Europe and the campus.

Parochial Pupil Decline Continues

Transfers to Public Schools Expected to be Accelerated

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — The number of parochial and private school pupils in the state will continue to decline, and the rate of enrollment loss will probably accelerate in the next few years, a state department of Public Instruction survey indicated.

The department is required to plan ahead for the financing of the public schools to which most of the non-public school pupils are transferred when there are financing or staff recruiting difficulties that bring about the closing of their original schools, or the reduction in numbers of their classes.

Down 20,000
This year the number of non-public school pupils has been estimated at 231,000, a drop of about 20,000 from the previous year. Declines have been noted in each year since 1965. The 1969-70 non-public school enrollment figure is estimated at 202,000, and for 1970-71, the prediction is for a total of only 173,000 pupils.

If realized, that decline would represent a loss of about 40 per cent of the non-public school enrollment in a period of six years. The surveys also show that the decline is relatively higher in the grades than in the non-public high schools, a spokesman for the department said.

Meat Packers Dropping Out Of Business

20 Per Cent Fewer Firms Since Start Of Federal Inspection

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — Despite the state's fight for less restrictive federal meat inspection rule to preserve small businessmen in Wisconsin, the number of operating plants has dropped by about 20 per cent, the State Board on Agriculture has been told.

The report brought the charge from board member Roger Bidick that labor union aims of forcing meat processing business to larger plants is being fulfilled despite the state's refusal to take part in the federal meat inspection program.

The state department and board, citing facilities and operating restrictions in the new federal "clean meats" act as compared with the sweeping state program, have claimed that the federal program would force small slaughtering houses and meat processors out of business.

When the federal program went into effect, five larger plants were transferred to direct federal inspection, and smaller plants had to comply with the regulations despite the lack of state cooperation.

Fewer Plants
Wisconsin now has 70 fewer plants than when the program started, according to the report filed with the board. Although the federal plants total only 98 of the 351 inspected systems must make adjustments for the transfers of large numbers of additional students, there is evidence that it is nationwide and that in some states the erosion of non-public school enrollment is even more severe.

One official said that Wisconsin for a long period ranked fourth in the country, in ratio to population, in non-public school enrollment. He also pointed to a recent survey that indicates the state now ranks second in the country.

plants in the state. They inspect 95 per cent of the meat in Wisconsin due to their volume of production.

State Agriculture Secretary Donald McDowell told his board that the inspection program itself was not forcing the plants out of business, but that the economics of the industry was.

"It's like the Ma and Pa groceries," he said, competing with modern supermarkets.

When milk house regulations were adopted the same fear was felt, said McDowell, "but no more than a half dozen were regulated out of business," he said.

Fred Griffith of the state department staff said that the attention paid the new law forced attention to the economics of the business operations of such plants on their owners.

Losing Money
"The law accelerated this attention. They suddenly realized that they were losing money on every animal they killed," he said.

The report also pointed out that the state inspectors condemn more than 650,000 pounds of meat from 222,000 meat plants.

swine and cattle slaughtered in the state.

The state condemnation rate of four tenths of one per cent of all meat inspected is slightly lower than the federal condemnation rate, the board was told, because the state deals with smaller plants that handle generally better quality animals than the big, federally inspected meat plants.

Sex Education Program Given At New London

Junior High Pupils, Parents Attend Physiological Talks

NEW LONDON — A sex education program presented on a family basis can be an enlightening experience for youngsters and a satisfying experience for parents.

A program of this type was presented here for seventh through eighth grade pupils and their parents.

About 350 fathers and sons attended the program Wednesday evening and a large number of mothers and daughters attend the following night.

Biological Discussion
Supt. H. James Ramsdall said the program was a biological and physiological discussion on sex, not on the moral aspects. He told participants the moral question could best be answered by clergymen.

The entire program, including a film showing the birth of a child, was explained to the clergy about two weeks ago and received their enthusiastic support.

The program was a high level presentation given by Dr. J. W. Weber, which maintained a professional status. Participation was on a voluntary basis.

Questions Answered
Questions, parents in many cases were unable to answer or didn't know how to answer, were explained and discussed.

The movie not only cleared any unanswered questions, but explained the physiological aspects. But more than anything it portrayed the importance of "family togetherness" and the "love of parents."

Natural child birth is an experience few fathers have witnessed. One husband told his wife that he was even more appreciative of her after witnessing the child birth.

The miracle of birth was not only cleared up for the youngsters, but for many of the adults as well.

Clintonville Man Is Uninjured When Car Hits Ditch on U. S. 45

NEW LONDON — A Clintonville man escaped injury in a one-car crash about 4:40 p.m. Saturday on U.S. 45 south of County Trunk D.

City police said a car driven by Robert E. Anderson, 47, 162 McKinley Ave., Clintonville, was traveling north on U.S. 45, ran into the east ditch and broke down a barbed wire fence on property owned by Norman Handscke, along Shawano Road and struck two utility poles.

Anderson told police he ran onto the shoulder of the road and lost control of his car while attempting to avoid a collision with an approaching vehicle traveling in his lane of traffic. The which was passing another approaching vehicle.

Snow and Cold Weather have not hampered progress on Brillion's $750,000 public school addition. A crane, with a half-yard bucket, was used to move the concrete from trucks to the basement wall forms. Workmen, lower photo, are emptying the bucket into the forms. (Coenen Photos)

Auto Catches Fire After Running Into Ditch Near Waupaca

WAUPACA — Fire caused minor damage to a car owned by William Springborn, 416 W. Fulton St., Waupaca, Sunday about 7:15 p.m.

The fire broke out under the hood of the car after an attempt was made to start it after it had ran into a ditch on State 22, approximately one-half mile south of the State 22-54 intersection. Police said a gas line apparently broke when the car ran into the ditch, and it burst into flames when an attempt was made to start it.

The Waupaca Fire Department was called but when they arrived the fire had been extinguished by Springborn and Waupaca County Traffic Patrolman Robert Starks. The two used snow to put out the fire.

The General Services Administration, which is the house-keeping agent for the federal government, leased the contract for the building to the Raymond McClone Construction Co., town of Menasha, 8th Dist. Rep. John Byrnes announced Saturday.

The construction company will build the structure of 3,498 net square feet and the building will be located at the northwest corner of Richmond Street and Parkway Boulevard.

Five Year Lease
The government will pay $17,028 per year rental on the building for a period of five years. McClone will bear all the expense of construction. The building is scheduled for occupancy June 1.

The regional social security office is now housed on the second floor of the courthouse annex and occupies about 2,300 square feet of space.

Social Security officials have been seeking other office accommodations on the ground floor because of the difficulty for older people to climb stairs or use an elevator.

The possibility of providing federal office space in the proposed city-county safety building had also been discussed but was agreed that ground floor space would probably not be possible.

The county is not expected to have any problem filling the space in the annex that will be vacated by the Social Security office. The county social services department, which also occupies part of the annex, has been seeking more space and will probably take over part of the area.

Other non-county governmental functions in the courthouse also will probably be moved into the annex, county officials indicated.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which is scheduled to move into the new building along with Social Security, presently does not have an office in Appleton.

Schools Closed by Weather May Operate on Saturdays

Spring Vacation in Clintonville Already Eliminated by Need To Make Up Days Lost to Storms

CLINTONVILLE — Students here are likely to find Saturdays are just like any other day if weather continues to force district schools to close.

Required make up days have already wiped out the spring vacation, and the board of education Thursday approved scheduling Saturday classes for any days missed because of weather during the remainder of the year. Five days have been missed thus far.

Supt. K. O. Rawson asked the board to approve a Saturday make-up date so district schools would be able to close for Good Friday.

In other business, Rawson requested the district to purchase two additional school buses, with one to be delivered before school starts next September. The buses would be replacements for two of the district's 12-unit fleet. In addition, the district also leases five buses from Jelco Co.

Rawson recommended the buses meet the same specifications as the one purchased last year. The board appointed Joe Peeters and Norman Crook to check the specifications and present them at the next meeting.

Shared services to be purchased from Cooperative Educational Service Agency-8 were discussed and tabled after Rawson told the board many angles were not resolved in the Title I program. However, he said he would be able to report on the program within two weeks and the issue was placed on the agenda for the next meeting.

At a previous meeting the board had gone on record favoring participation in the mobile laboratory program.

It was announced a North Central team will re-evaluate the district schools on Jan. 28, 29 and 30.

Harland Kirchner, a board director, suggested a meeting be arranged with a representative of the Vocational, Technical and Adult Education District 12 (VTE-12) to get a detailed insight to the over-all program. It was noted that Rawson was program chairman for the Feb. 24 meeting of the Rotary Club, and it was suggested that the representative be invited to present the program to the club on that date and then meet later with the board. If this date could not be confirmed, another date would be arranged.

Scout Dance
Girl Scout Troop 138 asked permission to use the gymnasium for a dance Feb. 8. The request was granted without cost to the troop.

The board agreed to approve a request for a night school golf class. A fee of $7 was approved for 10 hours of instruction in the old gym at the junior high school.

Discussion was conducted on questions which will be submitted for consideration at the Wisconsin Association of School Boards convention in Milwaukee on Jan. 22, 23 and 24. Mrs. George McCauley is the delegate, however, several members plan to attend.

The national Association of School Boards convention, scheduled April 12 to 15 in Miami, was discussed. Dr. Peter Oberhauser and Norman Crook plan to attend

Question Wisdom Of Early Cuts in Education Budget

CCHE Now Fears Additional Paring of Bare Bone Package

MADISON — It may have been a mistake to make massive cuts in higher education budget requests before sending them on to the governor and the Legislature, the secretary of the Coordinating Council for Higher Education (CCHE) warned Friday.

William Kraus, Stevens Point, a citizen member of the CCHE and head of Gov. Warren P. Knowles' re-election campaign unit last fall, made the admission in the face of fears that public attitudes against rising taxes, skyrocketing spending requests and the University of Wisconsin might lead to damaging additional cuts in the education budgets.

Kraus had championed the effort on the CCHE which climaxed on Nov. 8 to prepare an "honest, barebones budget" for submission to the governor and the Legislature for spending in the 1969-71 biennium.

Past budgets, including those approved by the coordinating council, have been severely attacked as containing sizable amounts of "padding" to protect truly desired budget levels. In the legislature, higher education has frequently been attacked as budgeting on the "Maxwell Street" theory.

Kraus said that post-election revelations of a budget deficit this biennium of up to $50 million and total state agency spending requests in the general operations category totalling $1.77 billion makes it apparent that further cuts may be made in higher education requests.

The requests, he noted, were trimmed by the council for the first time to the level that the council members truly felt was needed to support state higher education in the coming two years.

"I do sort of feel like a dummy going up there (to the capitol) and pretending that nothing has happened since Nov. 8," said Kraus of the requests and the deficit and total budget size. "But I guess all I can do is go up there and defend it to death."

"What I am desperately afraid of now is that we should not have done it that way. Things have changed so much since then... that this is a whole new ball game. We may have doublecrossed the systems," he warned.

Donald Percy, a UW budget official, warned Kraus that he should not be volunteering to make cuts in the higher education budgets in response to the unexpected additional revenue needs in basic education and in welfare programs of the state.

No other fields are coming to the aid of higher education budgets, he said.

Percy attacked the Council by saying that "hollow words" about "barebones budgets" had been spoken when the budget cleared the CCHE with more than $70 million trimmed from it.

"Your 'barebone budget' is going to be even more bare realistically and I don't think you have to volunteer cuts," said Percy. "The point is, if you aren't going to be the advocates, who is?"

Kraus had said that if given the choice by the Legislature of facing faculty salary cuts, or

Bomb Scare Delays Commencement

OSHKOSH — Commencement exercises at OSU were delayed about a half hour Friday night after a bomb threat had been received and fire department officials searched Albee Hall before allowing the program to go ahead.

Martin Agronsky, TV news reporter and analyst, spoke on US involvement in Vietnam to the audience of 2,100, including the 341 graduates.

Several uniformed and plainclothes policemen were stationed throughout Albee Hall in case there was further outbreak of sit-ins and demonstrations that have occurred at the University in recent weeks.

Only four demonstrators, carrying signs, stationed themselves outside one of the doors but left when the program began.

"If our involvement in this (Vietnam) war is to have any value, it must be a lesson that can save us from similar wars in the future," Agronsky a newsmen with 25 years experience on the Washington scene, told the audience. He added, "a nation who doesn't examine its past mistakes is doomed to repeat them."

"I would urge upon you all, and particularly the college audience, that if you want to make use of the mistakes of the past mistakes is doomed to must question the so-called doctrine of American infallibility," Agronsky said.

Agronsky said national pride and a long-standing commitment to a particular policy, whether right or wrong, were the principal reasons why it was so hard for a nation like America to admit past mistakes.

Agronsky said the question now confronting the nation, and President - elect Nixon, is the question of American power and how it must be used.

"Today, a nation like ours, which possesses absolute power, is under the overwhelming obligation to use that power wisely and with restraint," he said.

Everyone's Responsibility

He noted that the responsibilities for the foreign and domestic policies of the country did not rest alone with the president, secretary of state or congress.

"Times like these demand a maturity, sophistication and implementation of that responsibility by the average citizen," he said.

He noted a television interview he conducted with the late Robert Kennedy, in which Kennedy said the war in Vietnam was the responsibility of every American citizen.

Agronsky quoted Kennedy as saying America was "not just the land, not just the mountains, but what the country stands for, and that, I think, is being undermined by foreign policy."

Agronsky said Kennedy represented a "call to people to understand that the individual, in a free society, must accept his responsibility."

He added that tolerance and respect for conflicting opinions and ideologies is an overriding need of the modern world.

Need Tolerance

He said there must be tolerance for opinion and ideologies that we detest — even those countries that live under a system different from ours."

Those that wish to make the world over in the American image cannot succeed, he stated.

"The overriding and underlying American concern today is to keep the peace, and most Americans still believe more can be accomplished through reason rather than force."

"The best thing Americans can do today is hold fast to those beliefs," he said.

Legislative Uproar Promised Over Knowles Budget Deficit

MADISON (AP)—The political job. That leaves sal. s taxes as potential candidates. And Democrats have re-mund the GOP that they were t'aming the 1967-1968 budget for the Democratic minority has having inspired increases in local property taxes. The Republicans' domination in the Legislature at least provides them with the political opportunity of showing they can respond to a deficit problem. Knowles already has outlined an executive austerity program which an aide predicted could produce $25 million in savings by June 30 and virtually nullify the deficit. That was the same aide who last year forecast a surplus of $3 million. Republicans open the session Tuesday afternoon with 52 members in the Assembly against 48 Democrats. They are masters of the Senate 23-10. The GOP picked up two Senate seats in the Nov. 5 election. They didn't do as well in the Assembly elections as they had expected having opened the 1967 session with a 54-46 advantage. Knowles is to deliver his budget and tax message to the lawmakers Jan. 30. Hearings on the state general fund budget probably will get underway by Feb. 11. The governor himself might not be present when the 1969 Legislature concludes its response to the financial problems. Knowles, 60, is reported to be in line for an appointment with the Nixon administration. GOP leaders in Madison insist, however, that the governor wouldn't resign his post until the budget and tax issues are resolved.

While the GOP-controlled Senate and Assembly face the state government's most serious deficit problem since the Depression era, Democrats view the coming months as the opening round in the 1970 general election campaign.

Republican Gov. Warren P. Knowles won re-election Nov. 5, and the GOP retained control of the Legislature in an election campaign highlighted by their party's boasts that they adopted a $1 billion biennial budget in 1967 without burdening citizens with a tax increase.

This proud accomplishment was shattered Jan. 3 when Knowles' office officially predicted a deficit by June 30 of $25.9 million.

"Fraudulent Idea"

Democrats promptly accused Knowles of having known last year of the deficit, and of having kept it a secret to run "his campaign on the fraudulent idea that he had a balanced budget."

Democratic leaders held a news conference Jan. 7, declaring they plan to make the Republicans pay politically. One of them, minority leader Robert T. Huber, announced Thursday he was withdrawing from two key legislative committees to devote his time on the floor for "the many problems that will face the Legislature."

Former attorney general Bronson C. La Follette, beaten Nov. 5 in his campaign to deprive Knowles of a third term, described the deficit issue as "the kick-off of the 1970 campaign."

The state's constitutional offices become four-year jobs in 1970 instead of two, a feature that makes a Republican deficit embarrassment especially appealing for Democrats, who currently don't have a single member in a top executive position.

To make a gloomy situation even more gloomy for Republicans, this year's legislative session is confronted with a record $17 billion in budget requests for the biennium beginning July 1.

Knowles said unexpected welfare costs produced the deficit in his no-tax-increase budget. Medicaid, the governor said, is to blame for more than a third of the projected deficit.

Yet it is small compared to the additional $456 million which Knowles said will be needed to maintain existing services to state agencies and local schools. The extra sum will be needed, he said, even if there are no new programs.

Taxes, therefore, may take the feature role in the Legislature's 1969 limelight, which Democrats presumably will keep burning as brightly as possible.

The governor has said an increase in the state income tax probably wouldn't handle the

No Cost Figures Available Feb. 8 Made Deadline for Parishes To Decide on School Consolidation

CHILTON — Despite the fact that no definite cost figures could be cited and no assurance given that schools would be improved, Feb. 8 was set as a deadline for the decision of 11 Catholic parishes on the possibility of consolidation.

The date was set by the Rev. Richard Kleiber, diocesan superintendent of schools, at a meeting of the representatives of the 11 parishes on the consolidation question.

Represented were churches in Sherwood, St. John, Hollandtown, Greenleaf, Wrightstown, Chilton, Charlesburg, Jericho, Stockbridge and Hilbert.

Although further discussions between the various parishes are planned, spokesmen from the Sherwood and St. John group expressed the feeling that they would favor such a move.

Study Possibility

St. Mary, St. Augustine, both of Chilton, and St. Charles in Charlesburg, seemed willing to at least work out a study at another meeting.

However, Hilbert, Stockbridge and Jericho representatives expressed a hope that they could continue to operate on an individual basis.

These feelings were expressed by the representatives after Father Kleiber told the group of the possible areas of consolidation. He did not have any outlined plans and cited no cost figures, however.

"It appears likely that we could gain as many as 10 teaching sisters by consolidation of schools in this area," he told the group of about 80, adding that there naturally would be problems in transportation, financing, some loss of identity and parish loyalty.

Two Examples

He cited two examples where consolidation could save the parishes money and operate with fewer people.

At Sherwood and St. John there are a total of five nuns and four lay teachers. Through consolidation, he said, the rooms could be cut to eight with classes ranging from 41 to 47 pupils.

At St. Mary, St. Augustine, Chilton and Charlesburg, and possibly Jericho, the total of 17 classrooms could be slashed to 12 rooms, which could operate with five fewer teachers, the superintendent explained.

In a question and answer period, Father Kleiber was faced with three major areas of concern, presented by Mrs. J.W. Knauf, Chilton.

Cost of Operation

She asked if he felt the people coming into a consolidated school system would be willing to pay their fair share of the load, to which Father Kleiber answered that the actual cost of operations would have to be worked out after the decisions to consolidate are made.

Mrs. Knauf also asked the diocesan official whether the teaching sisters would be willing to pool their orders' efforts.

Father Kleiber said he felt that this would be no problem.

He also was asked if there was any assurance that the schools would have teaching nuns. "If we don't, it would mean going out and hiring more lay teachers, which would defeat our purpose here anyway," someone from the floor offered.

In answer to this, Father Kleiber said he didn't know "because these are trying times for Catholics, with the new changes coming about," but did indicate he was optimistic about retaining the nuns.

Transportation costs, too, were discussed. Some of the representatives felt the children would spend more time on the bus than in school but Father Kleiber pointed out that the school day would be 5 1/2 hours only. Other matters, such as cost and distance as well as a schedule to coincide with the public school operations, would have to be worked out. Many of the pupils would be eligible to use public school transportation.

"There are many sacrifices involved but we have to decide about how much we want to sacrifice in order to give our children a Christian education."

"I don't know if consolidation is the answer to our problems; it may work and it may not, but this could be the last effort to give your children a Catholic education," he said.

Assets Hike Reported at End of Year Savings and Loan Of New London Has Record Dividend

NEW LONDON — Assets of $6,488,014 were reported Wednesday at the annual New London Savings and Loan Association meeting.

This marks an increase of 15.1 per cent from the $5,634,208 reported at the end of 1967.

The report, issued by Robert H. Laux, secretary, showed savings balances held by the institution amount to $5,715,808, compared with $5,003,251 reported a year ago. Laux said 1968 was the best savings year in the history of the association.

A record dividend totaling $240,616 was paid during the year to the 2,138 account holders. A total of $977,115 in mortgage loans was put on the books during 1968, bringing total loans to $5,617,098, representing a gain in loans of 21.96 per cent.

Local Economy

Laux said the majority of mortgage loans are made in New London and the immediate area resulting in a boost to the local economy — particularly the local retail business and local contractors.

Looking ahead to 1969, Laux predicted increased competition for savings resulting from the recent increase in the prime lending rate, but he feels New London Savings will have funds necessary for area home financing.

Re-elected to the board for three years were Clarence Tribby, O. W. Capener and Francis Werner.

Officers for 1969 are Werner, president; Benjamin Hartquist, vice president; Clark Ingersoll, treasurer; Laux, secretary and managing officer, and Gertrude Blouney and Douglas E. Wolfe, assistant secretaries.

Debra Jean Waite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Waite, route 1, Hortonville, has been named Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow at the Hortonville High School. Miss Waite is now eligible to compete on state and national levels for scholarships.

Corn Available

Game Birds Face Starvation

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Hungarian partridge and pheasants face starvation in the Fox River Valley.

Heavy snows, sleet and rain have crusted the normally open feeding areas of the birds.

Free corn is being distributed throughout the Fox River Valley by the Bureau of Natural Resources to conservationists feeding the "Huns" and pheasants.

Dennis Hohlfeider, state forester in Appleton said he received about 600 pounds of cob corn Thursday for Outagamie County.

Hohlfeider is distributing the corn from his home at the intersection of School and Greenwood roads.

Although ruffed grouse also exist in limited numbers in the area they are eating the buds of spruce trees and are only slightly affected by the ice-crust.

35 Tons
Jerry Rieckhoff, district game manager for Winnebago, Waupaca and Outagamie counties said the feeding program is not new but is important to survival of the upland game this year.

He said about 35 tons of corn have been distributed in the three-county district this winter. When heavy snows and freezing rain occur many birds would not survive without the corn he said.

He cautioned, however, that well-meaning persons may do more harm than good if they feed birds only for a short time. Birds congregate at feeding areas and depend on hand-outs. When feeding is discontinued birds often will remain and starve.

Grit also is necessary for the birds. The grit which is available free at most corn distribution stations enables birds to digest their food.

Pheasants normally congregate in "wintering areas" according to Rieckhoff. He said this occurs because birds seek the most sheltered areas and best supply of food. State tagging studies have indicated the birds move as much as two and three miles into wintering areas annually. Pheasants will winter several years in a row at the same general area.

About 45 pheasants were recently seen along Capitol Drive in Appleton.

Rieckhoff said such flocks of pheasants are not uncommon and added that flocks exceeding 200 birds have been observed in Wisconsin.

Critical Period
Although winters in the Fox River Valley present problems for game birds they are less critical than spring hatching seasons he said.

Rieckhoff said modern farm methods call for early hay cutting and since birds often nest in fields, nests are destroyed by mowers.

He recommended conservation-minded farmers leave hedgerows of wild growth between fields. Hedgerows, little larger than present fence lines, could provide nesting areas, travel lanes and escape routes for the pheasants and Hungarian partridge.

Les Neustadter, district game manager at Plymouth, said there are "more Huns" down here than I've seen in the past. He said the birds should winter well unless unusually cold weather occurs.

Feeding Problem
He added that ice-glazed fields have presented a feeding problem for the birds in Calumet County.

Free corn is available at the Nichols Creek Public Hunting Ground, Nichols; Outagamie Conservation Club, Mayflower Road, Appleton; The Black Creek Lions Club; Black Creek, The Hohlfeider residence, route 1, Appleton; Twin Cities Rod and Gun Club, Neenah; and at the Asylum Bay Fish Management Station near Oshkosh.

Board Backs License for DDT Users

MADISON (AP) — The State Board of Agriculture agreed last week to support a state licensing provision for commercial applicators of pesticides.

The action paved the way for joint action by the State Department of Natural Resources and the State Department of Agriculture to get a pesticide control bill through the 1969 Wisconsin legislature.

Approval of the proposal followed the board's earlier decision to support a measure setting up a pesticide review board.

Arthur Kurtz, administrator of the State Bureau of Plant Industry, told the board that had 504 series and Pat Tisler hit Gov. Warren P. Knowles and Secretary of Agriculture Donald S. McDowell have received letters from numerous persons urging a ban on the use of pesticides such as DDT.

The Department of Natural Resources is holding hearings on a proposal that DDT be banned whenever it contaminates the environment.

decreases in budgets for new schools in Green Bay and Parkside, he would choose the latter.

Kraus criticized the systems for appearing before Knowles to ask that some CCHE cuts be restored, despite agreements to support the CCHE-approved budget.

Percy said that they had been invited by Knowles, and that the UW asked only that $5.5 million be restored from UW cuts totaling about $56 million.

The plans and policies committee of the council also voted to boost the vocational system's budget request by $1,859,000 in additional state aids to bring the funding system used on a par with the two state university systems.

The request brings the total state higher educational budget request as approved by the CCHE to $843,371,000. Of that sum, $42,213,000 would be drawn from state tax sources.

Non-Resident Enrollments

Of all the issues that are discussed in connection with the biennial round of budget discussions for the University of Wisconsin, we may suppose that none is quite as familiar as the school's historically liberal policy on the admission of non-resident undergraduate students.

Repeatedly critical questions have been asked in the legislature and elsewhere, as the University's swelling budget contributes to the financing problems of the state government as a whole. Repeatedly the University administration has brushed the questions aside, with a variety of explanations, among them the argument that such students from other states in which their parents are paying taxes are contributing in their non-resident tuition payments enough to cover the cost of their living and instruction at the University.

But skepticism persists, and it has been shown again in the comment of Regent James Nellen of De Pere that he will ask for a full-scale review of the question and all of its ramifications at an early meeting of the University's governing board.

We congratulate Dr. Nellen on bringing up the question, and President Harrington can take a bow for the willingness with which he agreed to such a reconsideration of a subject that is little understood, and that we fear in some instances may contribute to the University's problems of public relations with its own immediate constituency, the taxpayers of Wisconsin.

It has been said often, for example, that the non-resident tuition covers the cost of the enrollment of such undergraduates as are not our own.

The Shape of the Peace Table

At this stage it is difficult to understand why the hassle over the shape of the table in the Paris peace talks went on so long in the light of the final agreement.

Before the middle of December the North Vietnamese representatives had suggested a round table at which representatives of Hanoi, the National Liberation Front, the United States and the Government of South Vietnam would all sit. But the United States and Saigon insisted that the talks were primarily two sided, rather than four sided, mainly because of the reluctance of the South Vietnamese to extend any sign of equal status to the NLF. We do not particularly blame the Saigon leaders for their point of view. Perhaps the American representatives were hesitant to disagree with those from Saigon. But now, more than a month later — a month of

Mr. Rostow's Parting Thoughts

Walt Rostow, President Johnson's special assistant for national security who is retiring from government service, has been a hawk on the war in Vietnam. Now he suggests that we should have become militarily involved three years earlier than we did.

But while we disagree with his war views, his opinions on the failures of communism around the world are worth considering.

"If you look at each of the developing regions of the world, we now have many success stories: South Korea, Taiwan, Thailand, Malaysia, Pakistan, Iran, Turkey, Tunisia, Mexico, Columbia and Venezuela," he said in an interview with New York Times reporters. "There is not a single success story in the Communist world."

Actually Mr. Rostow's views on the failures of communism appear to be in conflict with his military views about the wisdom of our intervention in Southeast Asia. If Communist countries cannot succeed, there seems little sense in giving them the status which we gave to North Vietnam simply by making war against it. Ho Chi Minh might not have fallen from power in Hanoi — he was ruthless to his enemies and highly popular because he succeeded in driving out the French — but his nation would have been beset by the same

Looking Backward
Democratic Duty, Says Crescent

100 YEARS AGO
Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for Jan. 16, 1869.

Every Democrat in Wisconsin who has a family — and it is a Democratic duty to get one if not already so possessed — should take his County paper (The Crescent), the Milwaukee News and the Madison Democrat

If he is able and lives on the line of railway communication, he should take The Daily News; and during the session of the Legislature, the Madison Daily Democrat. Every citizen is interested to know the doings of the Legislature, and the gossip of the Capitol.

The Milwaukee News is the standard sheet of Democracy in Wisconsin; Messrs. Paul and Cadwallader make the strongest Editorial combination now possessed by any newspaper in the State. Col. Paul is an able and graceful writer, while Cad, God bless him, runs the sharp splinters into the rotten hide of Radicalism, and gives zest and pungency to his ink-drops.

While the Jacobins are busily at work enlarging their destructive organs, let every Democrat do his part toward sustaining the creditable Democratic press of Wisconsin.

Kraft Writes
LBJ's Final Messages to Congress
Mirror Old Hang-Ups of His Regime

BY JOSEPH KRAFT
WASHINGTON — Lyndon Johnson is going quietly. The storms of the past six years find no echo in the deadpan prose of the last state papers. And there have been no dramatic denouements.

But Mr. Johnson's final messages are not innocuous nothings. Largely because of Vietnam, they are potent political documents which give the country yet a new installment of the hang-up that has bedevilled national affairs for the past three years.

They thicken the barrier against serious diversion of money away from military purposes at an early date. At the same time they plump hard for generous social programs. Thus they perpetuate, and intensify, the basic policy deadlock Mr. Johnson was unable to resolve.

The key here, as in so many other things, is in Vietnam. In his State of the Union message the President maintained all the threadbare rhetoric of yore. There was the same old stuff about "invasion" from the North. On top of that there was more stuff about America's "vital interests in Asia and the Pacific."

Not a word was said about beginning withdrawal of American troops at an early date, though that is the hottest subject of debate in town right now, with hardly anybody asserting that purely military purposes require that the present contingent be kept entirely intact. Neither was there any reduction in the new budget based on troop withdrawal — though that budget will cover the period until July of 1970.

To be sure, there is a reduction in Vietnam spending from $28.8 billion in the present budget to $25.4 billion in the budget for next year. But that reduction is apparently based only on a winding down of combat activities — notably the cessation of air action over North Vietnam.

Furthermore, the saving is more than eaten up by new spending for other defense purposes. Thus the total non-Vietnam defense spending jumps from an estimated $52 billion this year to an estimated $56 billion in the new budget. With pay raises, the total increase in non-Vietnam military spending will come to nearly $8 billion. And at least some of the increase is very dubious.

One very large rise goes for naval construction — now especially costly because of the luxury of fitting carriers and escort frigates with nuclear power. Additional funds are also budgeted for deployment of the Sentinel anti-ballistic missile system — though costs there are rising faster than estimated, and technical bugs have developed.

Even as he jacked up the bill for military goods, the President staked his bid for greatness on his accomplishments in the domestic field. In his State of the Union message, he said, not wrongly, that "we finished a major part of the old agenda." And in his budget he pushed right ahead in providing more money for the new programs his Administration had initiated.

BILLION FOR EDUCATION
The new budget provides an increase of nearly $1 billion in money for education. About half-a-billion more is asked for manpower training programs. Another $2 billion goes into health programs. Housing and community development money is raised by nearly half-a-billion.

But hardly anybody connected with the problems of education, health, and housing thinks that these funds are anywhere near enough to meet the problems they are supposed to solve. It is typical that the housing budget provides for an extra 6 million low income shelters, but not for such needed community facilities as water and sewer systems.

What emerges is the familiar paradox of the past few years — measurable social gain not translated into a feeling of progress because expectations have outrun even the large amount that has been achieved. That depressing cycle can be broken only when even more substantial amounts are drained off for social purposes. And that means asserting a ruthless discipline over military expenses.

But the effect of the final hours of the Johnson administration is to make the assertion of discipline harder than ever. The most liberal President in our history has given a mandate to those who want to allocate a far greater portion of national resources to meeting internal social problems.

People's Forum
Tuition Grant Bill
Would Save on Taxes

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

I would like to offer some comments in response to your editorial on parochial education in Friday night's paper, January 10. This, in turn, was a comment of Governor Romney's statement in opposition to the continuation of private schools, particularly with regard to their efforts to seek public financial assistance.

There isn't any doubt but that your comments on the difficulties private schools are having is accurate. A glance at the Fox Valley Council of Government's study last April reveals the picture quite dramatically. Private school enrollment in Wisconsin has dropped from 272,911 in 1965 to approximately 218,000 in 1968. More importantly to Appleton, the Appleton parochial school enrollment dropped from 41 per cent of the total student population in 1964 to 34 per cent in 1967, and is probably closer to 30 per cent for the current school year. According to the C. O. G. study, there was a net transfer of private school students to public schools in the 1966-67 school year of 246, and a net transfer in the 1967-68 school year of 524. Current figures are not available but certainly the figures for 1968-69 are at least equal to the previous year and probably exceed them. There is likewise little question but that next year's figures will be increased still, because at least one parish in Appleton has announced the closing of two entire grades.

However, the cause of the transfer is predominantly the inability of the private schools to meet their financial obligations. This is caused by many things, but primarily a decrease in the available number of teaching sisters and in sharp increase in the average salary of lay teachers. The result has been the forced closing of a number of grades, and the indirect transfer of quite a few students whose parents do not believe that private schools will be able to continue offering quality education to large numbers of students. In short, the doubt that private schools can survive.

However, since the problem is primarily financial, I am a little puzzled by the opposition to public support for private schools which was expressed in your editorial in terms of taxpayer resistance to further school costs. Such financial aid would certainly place no greater financial burden on the taxpayer. On the contrary, it would relieve his burden to a considerable extent. As revealed in the C. O. G. study, the additional costs to the Appleton School District generated by the transfer of students from private to public schools in only the two years, 1966-68, was $385,850. These figures, of course, must be added to any further transfer of students because the students already transferred remain in the public school system.

On the other hand, the Tuition Grant Bill which is being currently discussed as a means of providing public financial support for private schools contemplates a payment of $50 for grade school students and $100 for high school students. On the basis of the C.O.G. enrollment figures, this would be a net tax cost of $381,500. Without even computing figures for the cost of constructing additional buildings to provide classroom space, and without giving any consideration to the increasing rate of transfers to public schools, the net saving to taxpayers is nothing short of startling. The current tax cost would not even equal the current tax cost required to educate those children who have already transferred, much less avoiding the annual cost of $3,000,000 which would be required if all of the private school students would transfer.

The saving of tax dollars is not, of course, the reason why these private schools exist, nor is it the reason why they should be publicly financed in any way to help them continue. The figures are quoted just to show that in my judgment the tax cost of providing public financial assistance to private schools is not in any sense a reason to deny such aid. It seems to me that it boils down simply to a social and political question of whether or not it is desirable to continue to have a competing system of education. I feel, as you indicated in your editorial (and religious reasons completely aside), that it is desirable to have a competing system of education. This offers parents a choice in the system of education which will serve their children, and will also provide the stimulus of

Tarr Report Practical
Document; Road Aid
Proposal Is Example

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
MADISON — When an advisory or study group such as the Tarr task force on local government organization and finance begins its work, it has two choices. It can take on its job with the idea of achieving academic perfection, in the state of mind of the editorial writer, for example, contemplating public problems from his third floor office, or the professor of political science lecturing to his classes in the ivied hall.

Or it can keep in mind that it is actually involved in a quasi-political job, and that its conclusions will be stuffed away in the musty files with only a glance from the politicians to which they are directed, unless its proposals have some degree of political acceptability.

CHOOSING SECOND POSITION
The Tarr Commission in its final report will choose the second position, with respect to the discussions that have been heard for several decades about the adequacy and fairness, or lack thereof, of the distribution of state highway tax funds. The report was written with the realization that it will be read and discarded, or read and acted upon, by that most human segment of the species, the members of the legislature who look back over their shoulders to determine what their constituents are saying and doing.

Thus it proposed what many persons may regard as a plan of negligible importance or significance, with respect to a more accurate relation of highway fund distribution to transportation requirements, but which contains the germ of future improvements nevertheless, and more important, may have a chance of legislative acceptance.

Under the traditional system, a generous share of the total income of the State Highway Department is parceled out in mileage allowances to local streets and roads. The local government lobbies have so adjusted the distribution formula so that there is a built-in guarantee that they will share in the same generous proportion as the gross state road revenues increase, and they are steadily increasing.

JUSTIFIED IN 'EARLY DAYS'
From the viewpoint of some urban critics, the formula is weighted in favor of the less travelled rural roads, and notably the town and country roads. Historically there was justification enough for this in a state with a dairy-oriented and dominant rural economy which had to have reliable rural transport to get a perishable product to market.

But lately there have been incongruous contrasts in the state. The rural roads are continually improving, while the state highway administration was forced to delay year after year vital major route improvements, such as the Butte des Morts bridge bottleneck, the crowded corridor between Rock County and Milwaukee, the lake shore route from Milwaukee to Sheboygan and northward, the route northward from Eau Claire, and many others that come to mind.

The reply of the committee is a compromise. It suggests a freeze of the local road distribution program, so that no locality will lose funds. Hopefully, therefore, the local government lobby may not become so indignant as to veto the proposition.

It then suggests that the increment of the highway fund, which is growing at a rate of four per cent yearly and which may grow at an accelerated rate in the future, be reserved for allocation "on a basis more nearly indicative of the highway requirements of the several systems and designed to reflect more adequately the various volumes and types of highway use."

SEES LITTLE CHANCE
In a somewhat clumsy way, and perhaps deliberately so, the study report says that it acknowledges there is little chance of redistributing the highway aid dollars now, but that the additional highway tax receipts of the future should be allocated more accurately, so as to put the improvements where the traffic is.

Most reasonable men acquainted with the psychology of the legislature will probably agree that is the best that can be hoped for.

Strictly Personal
Sicknesses Are Often
Classified as Crimes

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS
We must not forget that "crime" in a society is anything that the society cares to call "crime." A community can arrest women for wearing skirts too short or children for staying out too late, if these are defined as offenses.

And much, if not most, of what we call crime in our society is the result of such arbitrary definitions.

Gambling, narcotics and prostitution have been, in the past, the three main sources of income for organized crime in this country. None of them, in my view, should be defined as a "crime" — for all three are emotional and medical problems we have not even tried to cope with.

Narcotics are responsible for much prostitution and for many robberies. Girls go on the street because they need large sums of money for dope; and they need large sums of money because dope is illegal and therefore expensive to obtain.

And many men commit strong-arm robberies because they need $50 a day or more to satisfy the dope habit. If addiction were defined as a sickness, and we were ready to spend as much for treating and rehabilitating such people as we are for jailing them, over and over again, we might beat this problem inside of a decade.

competition to the public schools which can not be provided in any other way. As you noted in your editorial, "a considerable amount of innovation and experimentation has come from the private schools."

I do agree completely with the implication in your editorial that if some type of public financial support is not made available, the future of private schools is quite bleak.

Wm. S. Pfankuch

Gambling, of course, would not be classified as a "crime" in a rational society, because (like narcotics and prostitution) it hurts no one except the person who inflicts it upon himself. Moderate gambling is harmless, and immoderate gambling is a form of emotional sickness.

But our hypocritical laws against gambling are what keep the crime syndicate rich and flourishing, make the police corrupt, and feed the kitty of many a political campaign.

"Respectable" society does not care to know about such things. It closes its eyes to the absurdities of legislation, and then screams for "crime cleanups" every four years — even though the very system it supports tends to perpetuate the evils it deplors.

Slum dwellers see all this much more clearly than the bourgeoisie, for they live in the middle of prostitution, addiction, illicit gambling, cops on the take, politicians in the fix, the juice racket, and all the rest of that nightmare environment. Asking them to observe "law and order" in the midst of affluent corruption is just a sour joke.

Those who live in the lower depths see the true workings of the social organism, just as those who work in the bowels of a ship know much more than the passengers strolling on the "A" deck. The machinery does its dirty work below, and unless we help get down and repair it, it matters not how gleamingly we scrub the deck and polish the brass.

Inaugurations Often Have Been Something Less Than Dignified

Special to The Post-Crescent
WASHINGTON — The pattern of little feet created a minor disturbance and a warm family interlude at President Ulysses S. Grant's first inauguration. As Grant delivered his address at the Capitol, his small daughter broke from her mother's grasp and dashed to her father. He held the girl's hand until he finished, and the crowd checked them both.

Today in History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Today is Monday, Jan. 20, the 20th day of 1969. There are 345 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1937, as a result of the 20th, or "Lame Duck" Amendment to the Constitution, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was sworn into office for his second term—the first president to be inaugurated in January.

On this date: In 1887, the Senate approved the leasing of Pearl Harbor as a base for the Navy.

In 1892, students at the International YMCA Training School in Springfield, Mass., played the first official basketball game, invented by Dr. James Naismith.

In 1936, King George V of Britain died and his eldest son, the Prince of Wales, succeeded to the throne as Edward VIII.

In 1945, President Franklin D. Roosevelt broke tradition once again and was inducted into office for his fourth term.

In 1953, for the first time in 20 years, the nation inaugurated a Republican president, as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower took the oath of office as the country's 34th president.

In 1961, the youngest man ever elected to the presidency, John F. Kennedy, was inaugurated president of the United States and Lyndon B. Johnson vice president.

Ten years ago — First Deputy Prime Minister Anastas Mikoyan—regarded as the second most powerful man in the Soviet Union—left the United States after a two-week coast-to-coast visit.

Five years ago — President Johnson, in his first economic report, forecast records in personal incomes and corporate profits and told reporters he had started a campaign to cut the cost of electricity in the White House as part of a governmental program of economy.

One year ago — Turkey broke with her big Western partners and became the first NATO member to recognize the Greek military junta.

The founding fathers hoped that Presidential inaugurations would be solemn and dignified, but the unexpected often snarled the best laid plans, the National Geographic Society says.

Heat Agitated Guests

President James Madison's 1809 inaugural ball — the first held in the Nation's Capital — set a precedent in glitter and confusion. The crowd jammed into a Capitol Hill hotel in such numbers that windows were checked out to improve ventilation.

In contrast, nobody thought of heating the temporary structure erected for Grant's second inaugural. Guests danced in overcoats and hacked at frozen refreshments.

Andrew Jackson's followers had too much anti-freeze. After Old Hickory's inauguration in 1829, he threw open the doors of the Executive Mansion to his supporters. Packed in tightly, guests pushed, shoved, and caroused on strong punch. Women

Davis Fills Laird's Spot on Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican Congressional Campaign Committee said Friday that Rep. Glenn R. Davis, R-Wis., has been named to its executive committee.

The executive unit helps raise funds for GOP congressional candidates. Davis replaces Rep. Melvin R. Laird, R-Wis., who is resigning to become defense secretary.

UWGB Seminar to Examine Foreign Issues Facing Nixon

Timely topics which President Nixon will face in the years ahead will be examined in a series of discussions on the University of Wisconsin Green Bay.

The informal seminar, entitled "Foreign Affairs Facing Nixon" will be presented on 8 Tuesdays from 7:30 to 9 p. m. beginning Feb. 4.

The series, based on the 1969 Great Decisions programs of the UW extension division, will be moderated by Bill Vickery, of the Green Bay extension staff. A fee of $5 includes the price of individual study guides.

The seminar opens with examinations of Czechoslovakia, Russia and Eastern Europe and the fainted, china crashed to the floor, and furniture crumbled.

To escape injury, Jackson ducked out a back door and found safety at a nearby inn. Tubs of punch placed on the lawn finally lured the throng outside.

Although the nation was troubled by the Civil War in March 1865, Abraham Lincoln's second inaugural gala got out of hand. A journalist described the stampede of hundreds into the banquet hall: "Such a crush and scramble, there was! Little screams, broken exclamations, and hurried protestations against the rush were heard on all sides, but no one heeded or cared for anything but to find a place at the table!"

Decorum Shattered

The two dances that climaxed James K. Polk's rainy inaugural day in 1845 were designed to assure model decorum. One was priced at $10-a-ticket for high society, the other at $5 for the rank and file.

Through an oversight, the diplomatic corps was not invited to the more expensive ball so it went en masse to the other. The result, according to a contemporary account, was the most curious melange "since the time of the Ark." The wife of a diplomat found herself dancing in the same quadrille with her gardener.

Guests and servants deserted President Franklin Pierce after his 1853 inaugural reception in the White House. No one even told the President where to go to bed.

With a single candle for light, Pierce groped his way upstairs to find all the second floor rooms in disorder. He finally spent his first night as Chief Executive curled up on a spare mattress.

Down 20,000

This year the number of non-public school pupils has been estimated at 231,000, a drop of about 20,000 from the previous year. Declines have been noted in each year since 1965. The 1969-70 non-public school enrollment figure is estimated at 202,000, and for 1970-71, the prediction is for a total of only 173,000 pupils.

If realized, that decline would represent a loss of about 40 per cent of the non-public school enrollment in a period of six years. The surveys also show that the decline is relatively higher

Meat Packers Dropping Out Of Business

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Despite the state's fight for less restrictive federal meat inspection rule to preserve small businessmen in Wisconsin, the number of operating plants has dropped by about 20 per cent, the State Board on Agriculture has been told.

The report brought the charge from board member Roger Biddick that labor union aims of forcing meat processing business to larger plants is being fulfilled despite the state's refusal to take part in the federal meat inspection program.

The state department and board, citing facilities and operating restrictions in the new federal "clean meats" act as compared with the sweeping state program, have claimed that the federal program would force small slaughtering houses and meat processors out of business.

When the federal program went into effect, five larger plants were transferred to direct federal inspection, and smaller plants had to comply with the regulations despite the lack of state cooperation.

Fewer Plants

Wisconsin now has 70 fewer plants than when the program started, according to the report filed with the board.

Although the federal plants total only 98 of the 351 inspected systems must make adjustments for the transfers of large numbers of additional students, there is evidence that it is nationwide and that in some states the erosion of non-public school enrollment is even more severe.

One official said that Wisconsin for a long period ranked fourth in the country, in ratio to population, in non-public school enrollment. He also pointed to a recent survey that indicates the state now ranks second in the country.

Parochial Pupil Decline Continues

Transfers to Public Schools Expected to be Accelerated

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The number of parochial and private school pupils in the state will continue to decline, and the rate of enrollment loss will probably accelerate in the next few years, a state department of Public Instruction survey indicated.

The department is required to plan ahead for the financing of the public schools to which most of the non-public school pupils are transferred when there are financing or staff recruiting difficulties that bring about the closing of their original schools, or the reduction in numbers of their classes.

Other topics to be discussed include a study of Canada under Trudeau; the widening poverty gap in Africa, Asia, and Southeast Asia; the new relationship between Western Europe and U.S.; an evaluation of the Castro decade; the Middle East tinderbox; and the role of minority opinions in foreign policy.

Vickery said study guides will be available at the first session, or at the extension office on campus. He also encouraged those interested in attending to make early phone reservations with Mrs. Marjorie Leonard on the campus.

The surveys also show that the decline is relatively higher plants in the state, they inspect 95 per cent of the meat in Wisconsin due to their volume of production.

State Agriculture Secretary Donald McDowell told his board that the inspection program itself was not forcing the plants out of business, but that the economics of the industry was.

"It's like the Ma and Pa groceries," he said, competing with modern supermarkets.

When milk house regulations were adopted the same fear was felt, said McDowell, "but no more than a half dozen were regulated out of business," he said.

Fred Griffith of the state department staff said that the attention paid the new law forced attention to the economics of the business operations of such plants on their owners.

Losing Money

"The law accelerated this attention. They suddenly realized that they were losing money on every animal they killed," he said.

The report also pointed out that the state inspectors condemned more than 650,000 pounds of meat from 222,000 meat plants.

Briton Says Women Could Be Made Barren By Contraceptive Pill

LONDON (AP) — A leading British expert on women's diseases said today that the contraceptive pill might make some wives barren.

Dr. K. Vernon Bailey of Manchester University wrote to the British Medical Journal, urging doctors to refuse to give the pill to healthy young women who have not had a baby.

He explained that if, although apparently healthy, they had some malfunctioning of the ovaries, the pill could jeopardize their chances of having a baby when they want one.

swine and cattle slaughtered in the state.

The state condemnation rate of four tenths of one per cent of all meat inspected is slightly lower than the federal condemnation rate, the board was told, because the state deals with smaller plants that handle generally better quality animals than the big, federally inspected pounds of meat from 222,000 meat plants.

Wreckage of Jet, 38 Persons Lie at Bottom of Pacific Off LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On the bottom of the storm-tossed Pacific today lay the battered wreckage of a U.S. jetliner in which 38 persons died. A mile away rests the hull of a European jet in which 11 are entombed.

Aboard the United Air Lines Boeing 727 when it crashed Saturday night after take-off from Denver, Colo., and Milwaukee, Wis., were a theology school president... a college coed... the parents of six Wisconsin youngsters... one of United's four "Flying Le Roys."

One body was recovered from the jet fuel-stained waters around the crash site. Searchers also found scraps of the fuselage and mail sacks in the waters cut by sharks' fins.

Heavy seas and rain hampered search operations Sunday.

"He was a wonderfully human man," said a friend of Dr. Lowell B. Swan, 58, president of Illinois School of Theology, a Methodist institution at Denver.

"If there is a good in this tragedy," said Dr. Harvey H. Pothoff, "it is that Dr. Swan—up to the last minute of his life—was doing the things he liked best."

The two had represented Illinois at a ministry recruitment conference at Claremont School of Theology near Los Angeles. Dr. Pothoff returned to Denver Friday.

Bonnie J. Cottle, 19, was returning to the University of Colorado after visiting her parents in Palos Verdes Estates near Los Angeles. Her father, Capt. J. Russell Cottle, is manager of United's flight operations at Los Angeles International Airport from which the plane took off.

Returning as a passenger to Denver to pilot his own flight was United Capt. Warren H. Le Roy who joined the airlines with his brother, Capt. Vernon Le Roy, on Feb. 7, 1944. Their cousins, First Officer J.E. and J.V. Le Roy of Chicago, were the rest of the quartet.

Keith Ostrander, 29, of Newbury Park, Calif. was second officer on the plane and always dreamed of being a pilot. His pregnant wife was back home with their two young children.

About a minute after the plane took off at 6:20 p.m., pilot Arnold Leverson radioed: "I have a fire warning light on engine No. 1. I'm turning around and coming back."

Radar showed the plane made a left-hand turn about 12 miles west of the coastal airport. Then radio contact with the plane was lost and its blip on radar screens disappeared.

Officials were unable to say whether the plane had exploded before it crashed and disintegrated.

Nine Wisconsin residents and at least three former residents of the state were listed Sunday by United Air Lines as passengers aboard the jet.

Among the 38 persons aboard, United said, were:

Robert K. Schroeder Jr., 37, of West Bend, Wis., and his wife, parents of six children.

Miss Linda Rydell, 19, of Milwaukee, who was returning from a California vacation.

Howell A. Anderson, 45, of Greenfield, Wis., an employee of Allen-Bradley Co.

George Dolinski, 48, of Wauwatosa, Wis., on a business trip for a Milwaukee firm.

Joseph P. Enea, 31, of Moose Lake, Waukesha County, Wis.

Sgt. James E. Riesing, 21, of Wauwatosa, stationed with the Air Force in Hawaii.

Mrs. Robert Sommers, 20, of Beaver Dam, Wis., returning from visiting her husband, a serviceman in Vietnam.

Also listed by United were:

Robert Georgel of Los Angeles, formerly of Port Washington, Wis.; his wife, Mary, formerly of West Bend, and their infant daughter.

Dr. V. William Wallin Jr., 30, of Ann Arbor, Mich., formerly of Whitefish Bay, Wis.

Another Jet Hijacked On Flight to Miami

MIAMI (AP) — A young man clutching a Dominican Republic passport hurdled another passenger and ran "like a football player, dodging from tourist to first class" before grabbing a stewardess and forcing an Eastern Airlines jet to Cuba. It was one of two hijackings Sunday that took 257 persons to Havana.

The Eastern jet—hijacked as it neared the end of its New York-to-Miami flight—and all but one of its 168 passengers flew on to Miami during the night.

An Ecuadorian prop-jet carrying 81 persons was seized by four men armed with submachine guns and remained in Cuba. There was no explanation why Cuban authorities, who cite safety in refusing to allow hijets to leave with passengers aboard, detained the smaller prop-jet.

These were the sixth and seventh commercial airliners hijacked to Cuba in 18 days. Another airliner was hijacked to Egypt.

Most passengers on the Eastern jet returned to Miami early today aboard two prop-jets sent to Varadero, Cuba, to get them.

They told newsmen the young hijacker had given no indication that he planned to seize the plane before leaving his seat and grabbing stewardess Pamela Gates of Syracuse, N.Y.

"He had to jump over me, and he kicked me," said Gladys Schneck of New York City. She sat next to the hijacker and spoke to him briefly. "He just told me he came from Santo Domingo."

Another passenger, Charles Suskind of Brooklyn, N.Y., said the hijacker "got up and he looked like he was sick to me. He ran like a football player, dodging from tourist to first class, and then he grabbed a stewardess."

The man used Miss Gates as a hostage to enter the cockpit. He spoke only Spanish, but stewardess Joan Toumouli of Edgewater, N.J., translated for him.

Capt. R.D. Smith of Atlanta, Ga., said the hijacker held "what appeared to be a hand grenade. The thing had a little cap with a little handle down, and he had the handle squeezed."

"He said he was 19 years old and kept hollering 'Cuba! Cuba!'," Smith said.

"I told him to be calm and we'd take him to Cuba," the captain said. Smith told newsmen he pulled out a picture of his family and showed it to the hijacker, who replied: "I don't want to die either."

Smith, his seven-member crew and five passengers returned to Miami Sunday night aboard the jet. Three passengers said they were released because they were ill, and the Cubans allowed relatives to travel with them.

Cat Gets Ride in And Out of Train

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — A gray cat rode 440 miles from Chicago to Minneapolis on the Burlington's zephyr clinging to a drawbar between two diesel engines, trainmen said.

The cat, covered with ice and snow, was discovered when the train pulled into Minneapolis at 9:30 p.m. Saturday. The train reached speeds up to 90 miles per hour on the six-hour run.

A call to Chicago revealed that the cat is a mascot at the train yards there and that Robert Mattingley, Chicago pit foreman, was looking for the animal.

The cat returned to Chicago Sunday, this time warm and cozy in the engine room.

Court of Inquiry Navy Opens Pueblo Probe

By RICHARD E. MEYER Associated Press Writer

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Five admirals seated at a classroom table began today the Navy's inquiry into North Korea's seizure of the American intelligence ship USS Pueblo a year ago this week.

A question facing the high-ranking court of inquiry is: Did the ship intrude into North Korean territorial waters before it was boarded by the North Koreans last Jan. 23?

North Korea says it did. The skipper of the ship, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher, says it didn't.

Adm. Thomas I. Moore, chief of naval operations, has said that the Navy never doubted Bucher's word. U.S. evidence, Moore said, shows the Pueblo was 16 miles from Yo Do Island—four miles beyond the Communist country's territorial limit—when she was boarded.

Even if the court finds the ship was where Bucher says it was, the five admirals on the court of inquiry seek answers to many other questions.

Among them, one raised by Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee: "Why wasn't the Pueblo scuttled?"

Public discussion of this question was muted last month as the nation celebrated the homecoming of the 82 surviving crewmen released after 11 months in

Won't Disclose Evidence Ex-Aide of King's Calls Ray Innocent

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's nonviolent education and direct action wing says James Earl Ray is innocent of murdering Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. But he isn't saying what evidence he has.

At a news conference Sunday, the Rev. James Bevel said, "I won't discuss the specific evidence now because it wouldn't be beneficial to James Earl Ray. But he's not guilty."

Bevel, 32, a former liaison officer between SCLC and militant Negro groups, sent a telegram to Ray Saturday which read:

"You're Not Guilty"

"I would like to inform you that I would be very happy to take your case without fee. I was present on April 4 at the Lorraine Motel when Dr. King died—you have been accused of murdering him. Of course, I know you are not guilty."

King, who headed the SCLC, was shot to death in Memphis, Tenn., last April 4. Ray was arrested in London following an intensive manhunt and extradited to Memphis where he faces trial beginning March 3.

Bevel said he didn't step up with his alleged information sooner because "I hadn't been responsive to him."

"But then I thought, 'Here's a man sitting here that shouldn't be here.'"

Bevel said he would continue to go on trial in November but Judge W. Preston Battle ordered a delay after Ray fired his lawyer, Arthur Hanes of Birmingham, Ala.

And last week, when Foreman was taken ill, Battle ordered Stanton to begin preparing a defense for Ray in case Foreman could not be ready for the March trial.

Rev. James Bevel

Charles Timbers, 78, Former State Man of Year, Dies

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Charles J. Timbers, 78, who played a major role in Wisconsin's management of insurance companies and rates, died Sunday in a hospital where he had been under treatment for cancer.

Timbers, of suburban Shorewood, was deputy state insurance commissioner from 1946-55. In 1962, he was named the state's Man of the Year.

The Mauston native worked with the State Insurance Department before becoming service superintendent in the Milwaukee Fire Insurance Rating Bureau in 1923.

He was a key witness in 1921 in the "rule-book case" which helped set up rules for administering agency regulations. He helped write many of the state's insurance regulations.

Survivors include the widow and a brother.

Services are Tuesday in Shorewood.

Pile Treatment Works Wonders For California Couple

Treatment Shrinks Piles, Relieves Pain In Most Cases

Sacramento, Cal. Mrs. C. Arnold of this city reports: "I can't contain myself any longer to write you about wonderful Preparation H for hemorrhoids. My husband has also been using same and it's doing wonders for him."

(Note: Doctors have proved in most cases—Preparation H actually shrinks inflamed hemorrhoids. In case after case, the sufferer's first notices prompt relief from pain, burning and itching. Then swelling is gently reduced. There's no other formula for the treatment of hemorrhoids like doctor-tested Preparation H. It also lubricates to make bowel movements more comfortable, soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. In ointment or suppository form.)
